INTRODUCTION.

THE aim of all true philosophy is to raise man from the finite to the infinite and to make him indifferent to the world of sense around him. This has also been the goal of all true religion, and more so in India than elsewhere. Here from time immemorial this solid seeming world has been looked upon as a dream, God as the only reality and the merging of the individual into the Universal Self as the highest aim of life. Intellect however highly cultivated, duty however well performed, was never thought here to lead man to that which is beyond the intellect. Both left him many a stage lower and it was only through complete renunciation, entire forgetfulness of self, that he could realize the Self—the Atmá within as the Self of all, and secure freedom from the ever-recurring round of the Sansára and therefore bliss everlasting. “There is no hope of immortality from wealth.” “Where the I is, the Infinite is not. When the I ceases to be I, the Infinite shines in all its glory.” “The knower of Self (Atmá) only crosses the ocean of sorrow.” “Where there is duality there is fear.” When all has become one’s ownself, what is there to be afraid of. Unity alone is fearlessness. These are the dicta of philosophers and sages of India on the subject of religion and philosophy.

Various steps have been indicated for the attainment of this ideal, but they are all summed up in the words, renunciation of desire and destruction of all sense of duality. The Yogáváshishtha, one of the most respected authorities on the subject, describes them as the seven stages of Yoga or Gyána, union with or knowledge of the Supreme. The first is right desire (subhechá).

When man after having tasted the pleasures of the senses, finds them all to be unreal and resulting in nothing but pain, and turns his thoughts inwards, he begins to question himself as to what after all is this panorama known as the world, what have I to do in it, how far actions which give but fleeting fruits can serve my highest end, why should I waste my life in taking part in this juggler's show, what should I do to cross this ocean of life, where shall I find bliss which knows of no decay ? Actuated by this desire he avoids all foolish or idle talk, does not take pleasure in the frivolities of ordinary life, loves solitude and avoids society, does all the good he can, shuns evil, and does nothing which is likely to cause pain to others. His words become full of sweetness and wisdom and he begins to have love for all. Even this tends to raise him higher than his fellows and brings the god in him into greater prominence. But he does not stop here. On the contrary wherever and whenever he can, he seeks the company of the wise and the good and devotes his time to the study of, and meditation upon, the problems of life. Firmly resolved to cross the ocean of the world, he lives constantly in the company of those who both by learning and practice of Truth are likely to lead him onwards. Performance of good actions and controlling of the mind and senses from running astray, become a part of his nature and he enters the second stage known as the Suvicharná or right meditation. Here he sees what he has to do, what not, distinguishes between the spheres of knowledge and ignorance, learns from his teacher and the Sastras, what he is, what is the world around him and what is God ; and tries to subdue the little of pride, passion, avarice or attachment to the things of the world that may have yet been left in him.

He is now ready for the third stage known as the as-an-sangini—(non-attachment) where he cuts himself off from society more completely, betakes himself to solitude and passes his time in contemplation, on the banks of sacred rivers, in jungles or in the hills. Study of sacred scriptures, reflection upon their meaning, constant thought of the vanities of the world, performance of religious duties occupy his time and prepare him for further development. Two kinds of non-attachment (Vairāgya) now dawn upon him. The first is where he sees himself neither as the doer of action nor the enjoyer of the fruit thereof nor standing in the way of another doing what pleases him. He no longer attaches himself to anything whatever, but knows that God ordains all and that happiness or misery is not of his doing. Realizing that all activity of the manas (concrete mind) leads, to nothing but misery, he lets it have as little work as possible, and prepares himself for fuller renunciation of things of the world. Company of the good, study and reflection constantly practised, soon lead him on to the second stage of non-attachment where he finds that for him there is nothing left to do but to abide in his own self. His mind does not now run towards things of the outside world, but self-centred seeks to merge itself into that which is Truth, Infinity and Bliss itself. This in Yoga philosophy is described under the heads of Yama and Niyama. The former comprises abstention from (1) causing injury to others, (2) untruth, (3) incontinence, (4) theft, and (5) greed, and the latter observance of (1) purity, (2) contentment (3) self-control, study and resignation to the will of God. If one who has attained to this stage dies before he has reached the final stages of knowledge, he incarnates in the family of the good, the wise, and the pious, where the practices of his former life serve to carry him onwards. In these three stages which interlap each other, the world does not quite cease to exist though it loses the reality it once possessed. They are therefore called the waking states (jágrat). Persons who have attained to these three stages, act their part in life but in a spirit of greater tranquillity than others. Such men serve as beacon lights to humanity. Good becomes a part of their nature and evil can never come out of them. What they do, they do for others and their actions are guided by that highest of motives, the absence of self. Divine men like Rama, Janaka, Bhishma, Krishna and Yudhishthira, among house-holders, and Vashishtha, Viswamitra, Vyasa and Sankara may be cited as examples of those who acted their respective part in life, either as teachers of mankind, or as kings ruling their kingdoms for the good of their subjects, or as counsellors of kings, or as generals fighting for their cause, or as authors of works which live as long as the world lasts. The next four stages are the stages of Dharna (concentration) Dhyána (meditation) and Samádhi (absorption) of the Yoga Sastra. The fourth stage of Gyána (Satvápatti), is that of the accession of purity where the world appears like a dream. It has now lost its character of existence separate from the Infinite and is cognized as Truth and Bliss itself. But though Unity is here cognized, the duality is not yet fully merged into it. The mind, however, now rests in pure goodness (Sudhasatva), though the other two attributes of Rajas and Tamas have not yet altogether ceased to exist. In the next stage, the stage of complete nonattachment (asansakti), the mind becomes entirely detached from the visible like one in deep and peaceful slumber. It does not function, though it exists in latency. All duality has disappeared, all specific cognition gone, and the sage abides more completely in the Infinite. His actions now become like those of a child, simple and guileless, and yet he carries on the ordinary functions of life. His thought is however constantly directed towards his Atmā. In ancient Hindu literature men like Suka and Bharata attained to this condition. In modern times such instances are rather rare. The next stage is Turyád, the fourth condition, which transcends the states of wakefulness, dream and deep slumber. For one who abides in it, nothing appears to exist but Brahman, the Truth, the Infinite. For him there is neither existence nor non-existence, neither the I nor the absence thereof. Meditation of non-duality and avoidance of duality have ceased to be necessary for him. All doubt has disappeared. All fetters of the heart have been cut asunder. If the Karma which has given him his present incarnation, is yet unexhausted, he lives it out, but he is no longer of the world nor of anything in it. He is a jiwan mukta or one emancipated in life. Like a lamp in a windless spot, supremely blessed, full in and out, as if he had gained something unusual, but in reality abiding in that which was in him always, the Brahman, he becomes verily Brahman himself. The last stage is that which is beyond the fourth-Turyátita. It is not an object of speech or thought. Some call it Brahman, some Siva, some the supreme abode of Vishnu, some the separation of the Prakriti (nature) from the Purusha (the Supreme Self). All these are, however, names serving to convey but an imperfect notion of that of which no notion can be conveyed by anything in human language or anything appertaining to human thought. On entering this stage the sage becomes a videhmukta or free from embodied existence. Like rivers losing their name and form in the wide ocean, the sage free from both name and form attains to that which is beyond all, the Supreme, the Ever-effulgent Purusha. Knowing Brahman he becomes Brahman itself.

This is the goal of the philosophy of India which has led its wisest and best out of the Sansara. It still exercises and shall always exercise a deep influence over the lives and thoughts of all its people. The conditions of modern life are generally not so favourable to its attainment as those in which life was simpler. But even now men and women of all ranks and conditions look upon it as the crowning work of life. It has a fascination for them which outsiders can but faintly appreciate. The highest and the best here seek no other happiness but to avoid this recurring cycle of birth and re-birth which to them is fraught with nothing but misery. Kings sacrifice for it their thrones. The rich relinquish for it their most valued possessions, and men of education and position all their prospects in life and cutting all ties asunder betake themselves to a life of mendicancy.

Most notable instances of this are daily seen in even India of to-day. Up in the Himalayas and elsewhere also will be found men possessed of the highest culture and the most refined ideas, devoting their lives to study and realization of the great problems of existence. With the fewest personal wants, with no thought of self, with the most frugal fare and a small hut to take shelter in, they possess a peace of mind and serenity of temper, the surest indices of the peace within. One has only to sit at the feet of some of these men to realize how the Vedanta of India is a living religion and not a mere philosophy for the intellect, even in modern times. The most striking instance of this was the late Swami Rama who died in October 1906. The Swami came from a Brahman family in the Lahore District. He was an M. A., of the Punjab University, a great Mathematician and a Professor in the Foreman College, Lahore, where he was held in high esteem by his pupils and fellow-teachers. He was young, strong and healthy, with a loving family and good prospects in life, and yet at the age of only twenty-four he gave it all up, for a life of renunciation, determined to realize for himself the truth of what is taught in the Vedanta. For about two years he lived in the solitude of the Himalayas bearing all the hardships of the life of a Sanyasin and devoting his time to study and meditation. Having realized in full the truth of the great saying of the Upanishad, 'That art Thou', he came down to the plains in the end of 1901, and lectured in India and then left for Japan in 1902. Thence he crossed over to America where disciples flocked around him and he soon became a man of some influence. He returned to India in 1904, lived and lectured in the plains for a few months in 1905, and then finally retired to the hills where he died at the age of thirty-two amidst universal sorrow. He was a unique specimen of the highest culture of the east and the highest culture of the west, as much at home with Plato, Kant, Fichte, Hegel, Carlyle and Emerson as with Shamstabrez and Maulana Rum; as strongly imbued with the spirit of all that was the best and loftiest in the philosophy and literature of India as with the results of modern science. Unselfishness, purity and universal love were his watchwords in life, and rare it is to find such a true and ardent well-wisher of India.

amongst either householders or members of religious fraternities. There are at present more than 5 millions of Sadhus in India, but men of Rama Tiratha's stamp seldom appear in the country. Perhaps after Sankara and Dayananda, he was the only person who appeared in India to furnish an ideal for both religious men and men of the world to follow. He showed by personal example that the Vedanta was not a mere system of philosophy but capable of being realized in life. Is this all an ignis fatuus or is it something real which attracts people of the highest intelligence ? Is it the will-o'-the-wisp it appears to be the man of the world engrossed in his little self of pleasure ? The answer of the Indian sage like Swami Rama based upon knowledge realized is that it is the world which is the will-o'-the-wisp, not realization of the Infinite through forgetfulness of the I. If our senses were the only realities we possessed, if there was nothing beyond the termination of the body, if a life of hurry and excitement and competition was the only life worth living, men of the present day ought to have been far happier than their predecessors and should never have turned for relief for a simpler and more introspective life. The contrary however appears to be the case everywhere, and though deluded man always thinks his happiness to lie in what is outside him, experience that hard task master forces him to turn his thoughts inwards for true happiness. It is for such that the Vedanta serves as a guide of life. It promises man nothing unusual nor to lead him by a dash of the pen out of his misery. It preaches to him that hardest of all lessons,—the lesson of self-denial, self-renunciation and self-forgetfulness, before he can hope to attain to that which he seeks in vain in the world of sense. The man of the world looks upon the teachings of the Vedanta as the ravings of a dream. But a time comes in the life of every one when he ceases to look upon a life of pleasure as the only life worth living and when he has to stop and ponder upon what the authors of the Upanishads, the Bhagwadgita and Ashtávakra Gita have to say. The Bhagwadgita and the Upanishads are already available for English readers. The Ashtávakra Gita was not yet available though it is as effective a teacher of Vedanta as the others.

Little that is historical is known of the author of the book. His Gita which is a dialogue between him and King Janaka of Mithila gives no clue to his date. Janaka is more a common than a proper name in our philosophic literature, for a king who while ruling a kingdom had realized his self as the Self of all. It is very doubtful if the Janaka of our author is the Janaka of Valmiki or the Janaka of Yagyavalkya in the Brihadárnyaka Upanishad. On the other hand the Ashtávakra of the book may or may not be the Ashtávakra of the Mahabharata who at the court of Janaka has a discussion with Vandin, a famous scholar of his time and defeats him in argument. The story as given in Chapters 132 to 134 of the Vana Parva of the Mahabharata is however interesting in showing that the Ashtávakra of the epic was as great in the knowledge of Brahman as our author, even if the two were different. While he was in his mother's womb, Ashtávakra taunted his father with incorrect reading of the Veda and was cursed by him and was born with eight parts of the body crooked, hence his name Ashtávakra. But for deformity of shape he made up by unique proficiency in learning and at the age of ten repaired to the court of Janaka to have a discussion with Vandin. He was allowed to enter on giving proof of his learning and at once sought out his opponent. Vandin opens the discussion by asserting the supremacy of one, viz., the intellect as the guide of the senses. But Ashtávakra proves that besides the intellect, there is the Jiva or the individual soul presiding over the body. In reply to Vandin's argument as to three kinds of beings being born of acts, Ashtávakra advances a fourth principle viz., the Supreme Being which if it becomes manifest to the soul, makes acts (Karma) unnecessary. Vandin now asserts that the five senses are alone capable of cognizing things without need of a sixth, but Ashtávakra proves that without a sixth viz., the mind, they could not act. Vandin adds that besides the six there is a seventh, i. e., the Buddhi—the intellect through which the soul experiences happiness and misery, but Ashtávakra would have an eighth principle, the conscious ego (Ahankára) for the purpose. By enunciating nine resulting from the combination of three states of matter viz., rhythm, energy and inertia (Satva, Rajas and Tamas) in various proportions as being necessary for the evolution of the world, Vandin establishes the creed of the materialist. But Ashtávakra proves that the existence of the tenth, viz., the Supreme Being, is only real and that through Him only matter seems to exist. Vandin then brings forward the argument that eleven, viz., the five organs of action and five of perception and the mind, can of themselves cognize objects and that there is no need of a further conscious ego. But Ashtávakra tells him that a twelfth, the Supreme Being resides in all and is attained by the twelve virtues of truth, self-restraint, penance, good-will, modesty, forgiveness, freedom from malice, sacrifice, charity, concentration and control of the senses. Vandin finally takes his stand upon a thirteenth principle in the shape of time for the attainment of release and stops short by reading only half a verse. But Ashtá-vakra completes it and states that for those who have surmounted their illusion or nescience, the soul is unaffected by happiness or misery, and for them neither the thirteen above mentioned nor mind, egoism, intellect nor the five organs of perception and five of action stand in the way. The dialogue is unique in Sanskrit literature. But it shows how clever were the two Rishis, the one posing as a materialist and the other standing out as a Vedantin. So far the Máhabhárata.

In the Gita our author whoever he may be, has given us a lofty and pure ideal of Truth couched in the simplest language possible. He is free from all technicality or controversial matter. No discussion about the origin of things or refutation of the tenets of other schools of religion or philosophy finds place here. In 297 short verses he describes the way towards realization of Self in a manner that at once appeals to the heart of the reader. The book is divided into 21 chapters. The first chapter describes the way to self-realization and tells the disciple that if he wishes for release, he must shun objects of sense like poison and cherish truth, forgiveness, rectitude, charity and contentment like the water of life, and that as soon as he learns to dissociate himself from his body and abide in his own Self, he shall be happy. The second chapter recounts the disciple's assimilation of the teacher's instructions, when the former exclaims that he is the Self of all—That which illumines one body just as it does another, and that therefore either the whole world is his or nothing here is his. In the third chapter the teacher tests the disciple's self-realization and tells him how when one has known his Self to be the Self of all, he should yet cherish fondness for the things of the world and the teacher expresses surprise at even the sage who has known his Self, not yet being above desire. In Chapter 4 the disciple replies that the sage who has known his Self, is not affected by the fruit of worldly action, and is fully capable of moving freely and that he should not be likened to those who are borne down by the burdens of life. In Chapter 5 the teacher again points out four means of absorption into the Self by realizing the visible either as rising and dissolving in the Self or in fact not so rising or dissolving in it. In chapter 6 the disciple recounts his experience of self-knowledge, how unlimited like space itself, he pervades all and how all that is, is within him. In Chapter 7 he continues his experiences and tells the teacher that even though waves of the world rise and disappear in him, the limitless ocean of Truth, he does not feel disturbed at it but is always serene and unagitated. In Chapter 8 the teacher points out to the disciple that so long as the mind cherishes any attachment whatever, there is bondage, and that when it ceases to be attached to or wish for anything whatever, there is release. All sense of I is bondage, of not "I" release. Chapter 9 deals with renunciation and points out that both worldly work, as well as desire of life, should be sacrificed before the Self is realized. Chapter 10 deals with the means of attainment of tranquillity and tells the disciple that unless he renounces desire in every form, he could not be happy and that when all that binds him to the world will go even if he did not give up his attachment to it in this, as it did in other incarnations, why should he not relinquish it himself and be free and happy ? Chapter 11 treats of the knowledge of Self and tells the disciple that when he knows for certain that God alone ordains all things and that pleasure and pain, affluence and poverty, are the result of past Karuna, why should he attach himself to things of the world ? Chapter 12 deals with the same subject and lays down that only he who knows action and cessation from action including Samadhi to be both due to nescience, (Avidya) and has given up all action of the mind, is truly wise, truly happy. Chapter 13 describes the happy condition of one who has freed himself from all attachment whatever and does what comes in his way. Chapter 14 deals with the attainment of peace by one who has known his own Self as the witness of all and who has given up longing for release as well as aversion to bondage, who is free from all thought and whose mind is at perfect rest. Chapter 15 contains instruction in self-knowledge and sums up release to lie in distaste for objects of sense, and bondage in attachment towards them and supreme felicity in faith in the Self (Atma) being all knowledge, all bliss and transcending nature. Chapter 16 contains further instruction on the same subject and tells us that without universal forgetfulness, there is no hope of bliss, not even by reading all the Sastras nor by having even Brahma or Vishnu, as one's teacher. Chapter 17 describes the condition of the knower of Self and lays down that he alone is happy whose senses have become purified, who feels no pain or pleasure in things of the world, who has no love of life nor fear of death, nor cares for the dissolution or continuation of the world. Chapter 18 is the longest in the whole book and concerns with the attainment of peace. It tells us that without universal renunciation there is no peace. The world is nothing but a reflex of our own mind and becomes what we make it to be. This is "I," this is not "I," when this is gone, then there is peace. One who has attained to this condition can face the world boldly and need not fly away from it. Worshipped he does not feel happy, spurned at he does not feel grieved. He honors those who deserve honor but does not think of it afterwards. Happy he sleeps, happy he awakes, happy he moves about, he who has found his rest in his own Self. Such a one though appearing to live so far as the body is concerned, is in reality dead to the body and lives in his higher Self. Let the body go or remain, for him it is no concern of his. Whether he rules a kingdom or goes about with the beggar's bowl, if he has overcome desire, he is happy. Chapter 19 recounts the final experience of the knower of Self for whom nothing in the shape of the world, duality or non-duality, desire or the absence thereof, ignorance or knowledge exists, and who by his self-realization has extracted the nail of illusion which lay embedded deep in his innermost Self and is now free and happy. The last chapter is merely a list of contents of the previous ones.

This is a synopsis of the book and it is hoped it will serve to lighten the path of other aspirants for release in the future as it has done in the past. The first edition of the English translation published about three years ago, was very kindly received by the public. It is now published with the Sanskrit text at the suggestion of several scholars. The text is the Bombay text. In the translation I have tried to adhere as closely as possible to the original, adding where necessary notes to make the text clearer. I have also thoroughly revised the translation and the notes and added a few more notes.

A word now as to the general character of the teachings of the book. They are, to my mind, not the teachings of the earlier stages of work but of the higher stages of cessation of work, when the sage finds rest in his own Self. This is perhaps the reason why our author speaks disparagingly of Samadhi. The latter with its earlier stages of Dhárna (concentration) and Dhyána (meditation) is absolutely necessary for the aspirant after release. In fact without it, it is impossible to rise above the phenomenal. But a stage may come in the life of the sage when Samádhi itself becomes unnecessary and may be felt as a bondage. This is the stage of the highest development. One of the most difficult problems for the Vedanta to solve is how to reconcile worldly work with self-realization, how to fit in a life of activity with constant communion with Brahman. The answer given by the authors of works like the Bhagvad Gita and the Yoga Váshishtha is, that the knower of Brahman does his work in the world better than others because in him there is no thought of reward nor of the Self. He is more philanthropic than others as he knows his own Self to be the Self of all and yet this is the earlier stage of self knowledge. In the final stages where all sense of I and thou has gone, where the sage realizes himself first as all that is seen and then wipes off even this consciousness of universality, where the phenomenal has entirely ceased to exist, no work bodily or mental can be possible. When one lives absorbed in his own Self, free from all action of the mind and the senses, above all cognition of the world around him as the Self of all and yet as above all worldly work which is only possible in duality cannot exist. The body does not as the experience of many sages is, also exist much longer after that. But like the snake casting off its slough on the ant hill, the sage free from the gross, the subtle and the causal body is absorbed into that which is beyond name and form--the Atmá, Brahman. This is the aim of Ashtávakra

Gita. I give this translation in the hope that it may be of some help to those who wish to rise above the cares and troubles of ordinary life and aspire towards a life at peace and tranquillity not found in the world of sense around us. May this little book bring the thinking portion of the East and West together is my earnest wish.

THE ASTAVAKRA GITA.

CHAPTER 1.

The way towards realization of Self.

जनक उवाच ।

कथं ज्ञानमवाप्नोति कथं मुक्तिर्भविष्यति ।
वैराग्यं च कथं प्राप्तमेतद्ब्रूहि मम प्रभो ॥ १ ॥

(1) Asked Janaka :— How does one acquire wisdom, how shall emancipation be attained, how is renunciation secured, tell me this, O Master !

श्रष्टावक उवाच ।

मुक्तिमिछ्छसि चेत्तात विषयान्विषवत्यज ॥
क्षमार्जवदयातोषसत्यं पीयूषवद्भज ॥ २ ॥

(2) Astavakra replied :—If thou wishest for release, do thou, my son, shun objects of sense like poison and seek like the water of life charity, straight-forwardness, mercy, contentment and truth.

न पृथ्वी न जलं न गिर्न वागुद्यौर्न वा भवान् ॥
एषां साक्षिणमात्मानं चिद्रूपं विद्धि मुक्तये ॥३॥

(3) Neither earth, nor water, nor fire, nor air, nor ether art thou. Know for thy emancipation Atma (thy own self) to be the witness of these, having for its nature Intelligence.

यदि देहं पृथक्कृत्य चिति विश्राम्य तिष्ठसि ॥
अधुनैव सुखी शांतो वंधमुक्तो भविष्यसि ॥ ४ ॥

(4) If thou canst repose in the Chit<sup>1</sup> having disassociated thyself from the body, thou shalt this very moment be happy, in the enjoyment of peace and free from bondage.<sup>2</sup>

नत्वं विग्रादिको वर्णो नाश्रमी नाक्षणोचरः ॥
असंगोऽसि निराकारो विश्वसाक्षी सुखी भव ॥५॥

(5) Thou art neither of the Brahman nor of any other caste, of no order art thou, thou art no object of sensual perception. Ever unattached, formless, the seer of all art thou,—be thou happy !

धर्माधर्मौ सुखं दुःखं मानसः नि न ते विभो ॥
न कर्तासि न भोक्तासि मुक्त एवासि सर्वदा ॥६॥

(6) Dharma (virtue) Adharma (vice), pleasure and pain, are of the mind, not thine, O Lord ! Neither doer nor enjoyer art thou. Verily thou art ever free.

एको द्रष्टासि सर्वस्य मुक्तप्रायोऽसि सर्वदा ॥
अयमेव हि ते बंधो द्रष्टारं पश्यसीतरम् ॥७॥

(7) The one seer of all, thou art in truth free. This alone is thy bondage, that thou seest the seer to be other than thy own self.

अहं कर्तेत्यहंमानमहाकृष्णाहिदं शितः ॥
नाहं कर्तेति विश्वासामृतं पीत्वा सुखी भव ॥८॥

(1) Absolute Intelligence.

(8) Bitten by the great black serpent of the conceit of "I am the doer", do thou by drinking the antidote of faith in "I am not the doer", be happy.

एको विशुद्धबोधोऽहमिति निश्चय वन्हिना ॥
प्रज्वाल्याज्ञानगहनं वीतशोकः सुखी भव ॥ ९ ॥

(9) "I am the one pure Intelligence," do thou by this fire of faith, burn the dense forest of ignorance and be free from grief and be happy.

यत्र विश्वमिदं भाति कल्पितं रज्जुसर्पवत् ॥
आनंदपरमानन्दः स बोधस्त्वं सुखं चर ॥ १० ॥

10. That in which this universe appears to exist like the snake in the rope, is Bliss, Supreme Bliss : that Consciousness art thou -- be happy.

मुक्ताभिमानी मुक्तो हि बद्धो बद्धाभिमान्यपि ॥
किं वदंतीह सत्येयं या मतिः सा गतिर्भवेत् ॥ ११ ॥

11. One who imagines himself bound is bound indeed, one who imagines himself free is free indeed. The popular saying, 'as the thought is, so is the action', is true.

आत्मा साक्षी विभुः पूर्ण एको मुक्तश्चिदक्रियः ॥
असंगो निःस्पृहः शांतो ऋमात्संसारवानिव ॥ १२ ॥

12. The Self<sup>1</sup> is the witness, the all-pervading, the one, the free, intelligence, devoid of action, unattached, without desire, ever at peace ; through illusion He appears to be of the world.

---

(1) Atma—that which pervades all, that which takes all things, that which cognizes all things and that which is the ever present entity.

कूटस्थं बोधमद्वैतमात्मानं परिभावय ॥
अभासोऽहं ब्रह्म मुक्त्वा भावं बाह्यमथांतरम् ॥१३॥

13. Learn to realize thy Self as the ever permanent Intelligence, the one without a second, having relinquished all delusion of thy being a reflection of Self as well as all internal or external condition as appertaining to it.<sup>1</sup>

देहाभिमानपाशेन चिरं बद्धोऽसि पुत्रक ॥
बोधोऽहं ज्ञानखड्गेन तन्निःकृत्य सुखी भव ॥१४॥

14. Long hast thou, my son, been bound by the noose of "I am the body." "I am Knowledge itself": do thou cut this noose off by this sword of wisdom and be happy.

निःसंगो निषिद्धयोसि त्वं स्वप्रकाशो निरंजनः ॥
अयमेव हि ते बंधः समाधिमनुतिष्ठति ॥ १५ ॥

15. Unattached, without action, self-illuminated, unblemished art thou. This is verily thy bondage that thou betakest thyself to samādhi (suppression of the mind).<sup>2</sup>

त्वया व्यासमिदं विश्वं त्वयि प्रोतं यथार्थतः ॥
शुद्धबुद्धस्वरूपस्त्वं मा गमः क्षुद्रचित्तताम् ॥ १६ ॥

(1) "I am the body, I am the senses, I am the mind, (manas) I am the Budhi, I am happy, I am unhappy, these are my wife and children." Learn to dissociate thyself from conditions like these and realize thyself as being beyond all conditions whatever.

(2) Samādhi, the suppression of the functions of the mind, is for one who has not yet realized his one self as the self of all—the ever free witness of all the functions of the mind. When the Atma has been known to be such, then Samādhi itself becomes a sort of bondage, involving, as it does, for the ever the suppression of what had in fact no existence.

entirely detached from the visible like one in deep and peaceful slumber. It does not function, though it exists in latency. All duality has disappeared, all specific cognition gone, and the sage abides more completely in the Infinite. His actions now become like those of a child, simple and guileless, and yet he carries on the ordinary functions of life. His thought is however constantly directed towards his Atmá. In ancient Hindu literature men like Suka and Bharata attained to this condition. In modern times such instances are rather rare. The next stage is Turyá, the fourth condition, which transcends the states of wakefulness, dream and deep slumber. For one who abides in it, nothing appears to exist but Brahman, the Truth, the Infinite. For him there is neither existence nor non-existence, neither the I nor the absence thereof. Meditation of non-duality and avoidance of duality have ceased to be necessary for him. All doubt has disappeared. All fetters of the heart have been cut asunder. If the Karma which has given him his present incarnation, is yet unexhausted, he lives it out, but he is no longer of the world nor of anything in it. He is a jiwan mukta or one emancipated in life. Like a lamp in a windless spot, supremely blessed, full in and out, as if he had gained something unusual, but in reality abiding in that which was in him always, the Brahman, he becomes verily Brahman himself. The last stage is that which is beyond the fourth-Turyátita. It is not an object of speech or thought. Some call it Brahman, some Siva, some the supreme abode of Vishnu, some the separation of the Prakriti (nature) from the Purusha (the Supreme Self). All these are, however, names serving to convey but an imperfect notion of that of which no notion can be conveyed by anything in human language or anything appertaining to human thought. On entering this stage the sage becomes a videhmukta or free from embodied existence. Like rivers losing their name and form in the wide ocean, the sage free from both name and form attains to that which is beyond all, the Supreme, the Ever-effulgent Purusha. Knowing Brahman he becomes Brahman itself.

This is the goal of the philosophy of India which has led its wisest and best out of the Sansara. It still exercises and shall always exercise a deep influence over the lives and thoughts of all its people. The conditions of modern life are generally not so favourable to its attainment as those in which life was simpler. But even now men and women of all ranks and conditions look upon it as the crowning work of life. It has a fascination for them which outsiders can but faintly appreciate. The highest and the best here seek no other happiness but to avoid this recurring cycle of birth and re-birth which to them is fraught with nothing but misery. Kings sacrifice for it their thrones. The rich relinquish for it their most valued possessions, and men of education and position all their prospects in life and cutting all ties asunder betake themselves to a life of mendicancy.

Most notable instances of this are daily seen in even India of to-day. Up in the Himalayas and elsewhere also will be found men possessed of the highest culture and the most refined ideas, devoting their lives to study and realization of the great problems of existence. With the fewest personal wants, with no thought of self, with the most frugal fare and a small hut to take shelter in, they possess a peace of mind and serenity of temper, the surest indices of the peace within. One has only to sit at the feet

कुतश्चित्कौशलादेव परमात्मा विलोक्यते ॥ ३ ॥

3. Having renounced this world together with the body, I now somehow perceive the Supreme Self through wisdom acquired by the teaching of the Master.

यथा न तोयतो भिन्नास्तरंगाः फेनबुद्बुदाः ॥
आत्मनो न तथा भिन्नं विश्वमात्मविनिर्गतम् ॥४॥

4. Just as waves, foam and bubbles are not other than the water from which they emanate, even so is the world which has emanated from the Atma, no other than the Atma.

तंतुमात्रो भवेदेव पटो यद्विचारितः ॥
आत्मतन्मात्रमेवेदं तद्विश्वं विचारितम् ॥ ५ ॥

5. Just as cloth, when considered in its true nature, is nothing but threads, even so is the world, duly considered, nothing but the Atma.

यथैवेश्वरसे क्लृप्ता तेन व्यासैव शर्करा ॥
तथा विश्वं मयि क्लृप्तं मया व्यासं निरंतरम् ॥६॥

mine. Whose is this wealth? No one's. Knowing this, I see nothing that is mine. Taking my stand upon this, I have relinquished all sense of mine. Listen now to that conviction by which I find every thing to be mine. Not for my own sake do I seek objects of smell, taste, sight, touch or hearing, even though they come in contact with my nose, tongue, eyes, hand and ears. Thus have I conquered the earth, water, fire, air and space of which they are the attributes. Not for my own sake do I seek the mind in me though it be, thus have I conquered the mind. All these do I seek for the service of the deities, the forefathers, the guests and all beings. Thus everything is mine."—Mahabharata, Aswamedha Parva, Chap. 32.

6. Just as sugar pervades the juice of the sugar-cane, and sweetness pervades sugar, even so is the world imposed upon Me and I pervade the world<sup>1</sup>.

आत्मज्ञानाजगद्वाति आत्मज्ञानान्न भासते ॥

रज्जवज्ञानादाहिर्भीति तज्ज्ञानाद्वातते न हि ॥ ७ ॥

7. The world appears to exist from ignorance of the Self. With the knowledge of Self it ceases to exist. The snake appears to exist from ignorance of the rope, with the perception of the rope as such, the snake ceases to exist.

प्रकाशो मे निजं रूपं नातिरिक्तोऽस्म्यहं ततः ॥

यदा प्रकाशते विश्वं तदाहंभास एव हि ॥ ८ ॥

8. Light is my inmost nature. No other than Light am I. When the world is illumined, it is I that illumine it.

अहो विकलिपतं विश्वमज्ञानान्मयि भासते ॥

रूप्यं शुक्तौ फणी रजौ वारि सूर्यकरे यथा ॥ ९ ॥

9. Oh ! The world superimposed upon me exists in me through ignorance, like silver in the mother of pearl, the snake in the rope and the water of the mirage in the sunlight.

मत्तो विनिर्गतं विश्वं मयेव लयमेष्यति ॥

मृदि कुंभो जले वीचिः कनके कटकं यथा ॥ १० ॥

10. The world which has emanated from me resolves itself in me, as the pot in the clay, the wave in

(1) i. e., The world which is pervaded by Me of the nature of bliss is nothing but Bliss (Ananda) itself.

the ocean and the armlet in the gold of which it is composed.

अहो अहं नमो मह्यं विनाशो यस्य नास्ति मे ॥
ब्रह्मादिस्तंवर्पयतं जगन्नाशेऽपि तिष्ठतः ॥ ११ ॥

11. Oh, Wonderful am I ! Reverence to My own Self which knows of no decay and which survives even the destruction of the whole world, from Brahmá to a blade of grass.

अहो अहं नमो मह्यमेकोऽहं देहवानपि ॥
क्वचिन्न गंता नागंता व्याप्य विश्वमवस्थितः ॥१२॥

12. Oh, wonderful am I ! I bow to my own Self which, though associated with various bodies, is one, never coming nor going anywhere but pervading all.

अहो अहं नमो मह्यं दक्षो नास्तीह मत्समः ॥
असंस्पृश्य शरीरेण येन विश्वं चिरं धूतम् ॥ १३ ॥

13. Wonderful am I, Reverence to my own Self. None is wiser than I, who though untouched with the body, yet carry the world in Me for ever.

अहो अहं नमो मह्यं यस्य मे नास्ति किञ्चन ॥
अथवा यस्य मे सर्वे यद्वाङ्मनसगोचरम् ॥ १४ ॥

14. Oh, wonderful am I ! Salutation to my own Self, to whom nothing here belongs, or yet to whom belongs all that is within the range of speech and thought.

ज्ञानं ज्ञेयं तथा ज्ञाता त्रितयं नास्ति वास्तवम् ॥
अज्ञानाज्ञाति यत्रेवं सोऽहमस्मि निरंजनः ॥ १५ ॥

15. Knowledge, knower and the object of knowledge do not in truth exist. That in which from ignorance, these three appear to exist, That am I, the spotless.

द्वैतमूलमहो दुःखं नान्यत्स्यास्ति भेषजम् ॥
द्वयमेतन्मृषा सर्वं एकोहं चिद्रसोऽमलः ॥ १६ ॥

16. Oh ! Sorrow has its root in duality. There is no other cure for it except realization of the unreality of the visible and that I am the One Bliss, Intelligence, and Purity.

बोधमात्रोऽहमज्ञानादुपाधिः कल्पितो मया ॥
एवं विमृशतो नित्यं निर्विकल्पे स्थितिर्मम ॥१७॥

17. Knowledge alone am I ; I have imposed limitation upon my own Self from ignorance. Constantly reflecting upon this I have now found rest in That which is beyond the mind.

न मे बंधोऽस्ति मोक्षो वा भ्रातिः शांता निराश्रया ॥
अहो मयि स्थितं विश्वं वस्तुतो न मयि स्थितम् ॥१८॥

18. Release or bondage is not mine. All this ceaseless illusion has gone. Oh ! the world is in me, or in truth is not in me.<sup>1</sup>

सशरीरमिदं विश्वं न किंचिदिति निश्चितम् ॥
शुद्धचिन्मात्र आत्मा च तत्कस्मिन्कल्पनाधुना ॥१९॥

---

(1) The aim of the Vedanta is not the establishment of non-duality, but the removal of duality due to error. The Atma or self which is the knower himself can not be the object of knowledge, or as said in the Upanishad—"how can one know that by which he knows all this ; by what can he know the knower ?"

19. This world with the body is nothing, this I have ascertained. The Atmā is Pure Intelligence itself, how can then there be any superimposition of the one upon the other ?

शरीरं स्वर्गनरकौ बंधमोक्षौ भयं तथा ॥

कल्पनमात्रमेवैतत्कं मे कार्यं चिदात्मनः ॥२०॥

20. The body, heaven and hell, release, bondage and fear, all these are mere imagination. What is there for Me whose nature is Chit<sup>1</sup> to do ?

अहो जनसमूहेऽपि न द्वैतं पश्यतो मम ॥

अरण्यमित्र संवृतं क रत्तिं करवाण्यहम् ॥ २१ ॥

21. Oh ! for Me who see no duality even in the midst of a crowd, there is a forest even here, what shall I attach myself to ?

नाहं देहो न मे देहो जीवो नाहमङ् हि चित् ॥

अयमेव हि मे बंध आसीद्या जीविते स्फुहा ॥२२॥

22. I am not this body, nor is the body mine. I am not the Jiva (individualized self), I am the Chit. This was indeed my bondage that I was attached to embodied existence.

अहो भुवनकल्पोलैर्विचित्रैर्दीक् समुत्थितम् ॥

मय्यनंतमहांभोधौ चित्तवाते समुद्यते ॥ २३ ॥

23. Oh ! in me, the limitness ocean, on the rising of the wind of the mind arise waves in the shape of innumerable worlds of diverse description.

(1) "For the Yogi who has drunk deep of the nectar of wisdom, there is nothing left to do. If there is, he is not a knower of self." This is the declaration of Vedanta. Heaven, hell, smṛtras and their injunctions are all for the man of the world who believes the illusory to be real, not for the sage who has arisen above the world.

(2) This desire of life is one of the five off-shoots of Avidya and shall have to be killed before the knowledge of Self is gained.

मध्यनंतमहांभोधौ चित्तवाते प्रशास्यति ॥
अभाग्याजीववणिजो जगत्पोतो विनश्वरः ॥२४॥

24. With the cessation of the wind of the mind, the boat of the unfortunate trader, the embodied self, disappears in Me, the great fathomless Ocean.

मध्यनंतमहांभोधावाश्र्यं जीववीचयः ॥
उद्यन्ति द्वन्ति खेलन्ति प्रविशन्ति स्वभावतः ॥२५॥

25. In Me, the great fathomless Ocean, waves of diverse individualized selves arise, strike each other, play and disappear in a wonderful manner.

CHAPTER 3.

Test of the Disciple's Self-realization.

अविनाशिनमात्मानमेकं विज्ञाय तत्त्वतः ॥

तवात्मजस्य धीरस्य कथमर्थार्जिने रतिः ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the master.—Knowing the Atma to be the One indestructible Self, how art thou, a sage, a knower of the Self, still attached to the acquisition of wealth ?

आत्मज्ञानादहो प्रीतिर्विषयभूमगोचरे ॥

शुक्तेरज्ञानतो लोभो यथा रजतविद्वमे ॥ २ ॥

2. My pupil ! affection for objects which are in their nature illusory, arises from ignorance of the Self, just as desire, for a piece of mother of pearl mistaken for silver, arises from ignorance of the mother of pearl.

विद्वं स्फुरति यत्रेदं तरंगा इव सागरे ॥

सोऽहमस्मीति विज्ञाय किं दीन इव धावसि ॥३॥

3. Having known thyself to be that in which this world appears to exist like waves in the ocean, why dost thou run about like one who is helpless !

श्रुत्वापि शुद्धैतन्यमात्मानमतिसुंदरम् ॥
उपस्थेऽत्यंतसंसक्तो मालिन्यमधिंगच्छति ॥ ४ ॥

4. Having heard of the Self which is Pure Intelligence and Beauty itself, why art thou a slave of lust and impurity ?

सर्वभूतेषु चात्मानं सर्वभूतानि चात्मनि ॥
मुनेर्जानत आश्र्य ममत्वमनुवर्त्तते ॥ ५ ॥

5. Wonderful it is, that even in the sage who sees the Self in all beings and all beings in the Self, there should be left any sense of "mine."

आस्थितः परमाद्वैतं मोक्षार्थेऽपि व्यवस्थितः ॥
आश्र्य कामवशगो विकलः केलिशिक्षया ॥ ६ ॥

6. Wonderful it is, that even one abiding in supreme unity and intent upon the object of release, should be subject to desire and agitated by sensual delights.

उद्भूतं ज्ञानदुर्भित्रमवधार्यातिदुर्बलः ॥
आश्र्य काममाकांक्षेत्कालमंतमनुश्रितः ॥ ७ ॥

7. Knowing the nature of wisdom's great enemy, wonderful it is to see the sage who sees his end approaching, cherishing love for sensual objects.

इहामुत्र विरक्तस्य नित्यानित्यविवेकिनः ॥
आश्र्य मोक्षकामस्य सोक्षादेव विभीषिका ॥८॥

8. Wonderful it is, that even to one who is unattached to objects both of this world and of the next, who discriminates the eternal from the non-eternal, and who is bent upon emancipation, there should be fear from that very emancipation !<sup>1</sup>

धीरस्तु भोज्यमानोऽपि पीड्यमानोऽपि सर्वदा ॥
आत्मानं केवलं पश्यन्न तुष्यति न कुप्यति ॥ ९ ॥

9. Feasted or spurned, the sage of controlled mind who sees only his own Self, is neither pleased nor angry.

चेष्टमानं शरीरं स्वं पश्यत्यन्यशरीरवत् ॥
संस्तवे चापि निन्दायां कथं क्षुभ्येन्महाशयः ॥ १० ॥

10. Seeing his own body acting as if it were another's, how should one of great soul be disturbed by praise or censure !

मायामात्रमिदं विद्वं पश्यन्विगतकौतुकः ॥
अपि सन्निहिते मृत्यौ कथं त्रस्यति धीरधीः ॥ ११ ॥

11. Seeing the world as an illusion, with all curiosity gone, how can the man of controlled mind fear even the approach of death !

निःस्थृहं मानसं यस्य नैराश्येऽपि महात्मनः ॥
तस्यात्मज्ञानतृप्तस्य तुलना केन जायते ॥ १२ ॥

12. The great soul whose mind is without desire for even that which is beyond desire, who finds peace in Self-realization, what is there with which he can be compared ?

---

(1) Emancipation here means release from objects of the world. Like the silkworm which shuts itself in a cocoon of its own making, man shuts himself in this cocoon of belief in the reality of the world and even though the Sastra tells him that happiness lies in breaking through it, he dreads it.

स्वभावादेव जानानो दृश्यमेतन्न किंचन ॥
इदं ग्राह्यमिदं त्यज्यं स किं पश्यति धीरधीः ॥१३॥

13. The man of controlled mind who knows the visible to be in its nature a mere nothing, sees not this to be attained nor that to be avoided.

अंतस्त्यक्तकषायस्य निर्द्विदस्य निराशिषः ॥
यहुच्छयागतो भोगो न दुःखाय न तुष्टये ॥ १४ ॥

14 To one who has washed off all internal impurity who is free from all notion of diversity, and who has arisen above hope, enjoyment of objects coming in their natural course is neither pleasurable nor painful.<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER 4.

The Disciple's experience described.

हंतात्मजस्य धीरस्य खेलतो भोगलीलया ॥
न हि संसारवाहीकैर्मूढैः सह समानता ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the Disciple :—O joy ! there is no comparison between the sage who knows his Self, and sports in the world of sense, and those beasts of burden who are attached to the yoke of the world.

यत्पदं प्रेप्सवो दीनाः शकायाः सर्वदेवताः ॥
अहो तत्रस्थितो योगी न हर्षमुपगच्छति ॥ २ ॥

(1) Says Prahlada to Indra—"Without attachment, without pride, without desire and hope, free from all bonds and dissociated from every thing, I am passing my time in great happiness, seeing the appearance and disappearance of all created objects. For one that is possessed of wisdom, who is self-restrained who is contented, who is without hope or desire, and who beholds all things with the light of Self knowledge, there is no trouble, no anxiety, O Indra." (Mahabharata, Moksha Dharma, Chap. 222. Verses, 30-31.

2. Oh ! The Yogi though abiding in that which Indra and other gods long for in vain, is not elated.

तद्वास्य पुण्यपापाभ्यां स्पर्शो ह्यंतरं जायते ॥
न ह्याकाशस्य धूमेन दृश्यमानापि संगतिः ॥ ३ ॥

3. Good and evil touch not the inner Self of him who knows That. The ether (Akasa) though appearing to be covered with smoke, is in truth untouched by it.

आत्मैवेदं जगत्सर्वं ज्ञातं येन महात्मना ॥
यद्वच्छ्या वर्त्तमानं तं निषेद्धुं क्षमेत कः ॥ ४ ॥

4. Who is there to prohibit from moving as he chooses, the man of great soul who has known that all this is the Self alone ?

आब्रह्मस्तंषपर्यते भूतथामे चतुर्विधे ॥
विज्ञस्यैव हि सामर्थ्यमिच्छानिच्छाविवर्जने ॥ ५ ॥

5. In the world composed of the four kinds of creatures from Brahman to a blade of grass, it is the knower of the Self alone who has the strength to renounce the pleasurable and the painful.

आत्मानमद्वयं कश्चिज्जानाति जगदीश्वरम् ॥
यद्वेति तत्स कुरुते न भयं तस्य कुत्रचित् ॥ ६ ॥

6. One amongst thousands only<sup>1</sup>, knows his own Self, free from duality, as the One Lord of the world. Having known this, he acts in the world under the impulse of Karma which is already commenced to bear fruit (like a potter's wheel revolving even after the hand which set it in motion is withdrawn). For such a one there is no fear on any side.

(1) i. e., the Jiwanmukta.

CHAPTER 5.

The four kinds of absorption into the Atma.

न ते संगोऽस्ति केनापि किं शुद्धस्त्यकुमिष्ठसि ॥
संधातविलयं कुर्वन्नेवमेव लयं ब्रज ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the master.—No attachment to anything whatsoever is thine ; pure art thou, what dost thou wish to renounce ? Merging this aggregate<sup>1</sup> into the Atmā, do thou thus find absorption in thy own Self.

उदेति भवतो विश्वं वारिधेरिव बुद्भुदः ॥
इति ज्ञात्वैकमात्मानमेवमेव लयं ब्रज ॥ २ ॥

2. The world appears in thee like bubbles in the ocean. Thus knowing the Self to be One, do thou thus find absorption in thy own self.

प्रत्यक्षमप्यवस्तुत्वाद्विश्वं नास्त्यमले त्वयि ॥
रज्जुसर्प इव व्यक्तमेवमेव लयं ब्रज ॥ ३ ॥

3. The world though present to the senses is in reality not in thee, the Pure. It appears like the snake in the rope. Do thou thus find absorption in thy own Self.

समदुःखसुखः पूर्ण आशानैराशययोः समः ॥
समजीवितमृत्युः सन्नेवमेव लयं ब्रज ॥ ४ ॥

4. The same in pleasure and pain, full, equal in hope and disappointment, equal in life and death, do thou thus find absorption in thy own Self.

(1) Of the body, the senses, the mind, the intellect and the vital airs.

CHAPTER. 6.

In Truth there is no emanation nor absorption in the Atma.

आकाशवदनंतोऽहं घटवत्प्राकृतं जगत् ॥

इति ज्ञानं तथैतस्य न त्यागो न ग्रहो लयः ॥१॥

1. Says the Disciple:—As space unbounded am I, like unto a jar is this world, matter-wrought. This is knowledge certain (taught by the Vedanta and realized under the direction of the teacher). There is here no attainment, no relinquishment, no absorption.

महोदधिरिवाहं स प्रपञ्चो वीचिसन्निभः ॥

इति ज्ञानं तथैतस्य न त्यागो न ग्रहो लयः ॥२॥

2. I am the great Ocean in which the world is a wave. This is knowledge, certain and realized. There is here no attainment, no relinquishment, no absorption.

अहं स शुक्किसंकाशो रूपवद्विश्वकल्पना ॥

इति ज्ञानं तथैतस्य न त्यागो न ग्रहो लयः ॥३॥

3. I am that mother of pearl on which this world is superimposed like silver. This is knowledge certain and realized. There is here no attainment, no relinquishment, no absorption.

अहं वा सर्वभूतेषु सर्वभूतान्यथो मयि ॥

इति ज्ञानं तथैतस्य न त्यागो न ग्रहो लयः ॥४॥

4. I am either in all beings or all beings are in me. This is knowledge, certain and realized. There is here no attainment, no relinquishment, no absorption.

CHAPTER 7.

Realisation of Atma in worldly life.

मर्यनंतमहांभोधौ विश्वपोत इतस्ततः ॥
भ्रमति स्वांतवातेन न ममास्त्यसहिष्णुता ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the Disciple :—In Me, the limitless Ocean, the bark of the world tosses about, impelled by the wind of mind, but it affects Me not.

मर्यनंतमहांभोधौ जगद्वीचिः स्वभावतः ॥
उदेतु वास्तमायातु न मे वृद्धिर्न च क्षतिः ॥ २ ॥

2. In Me, the limitless Ocean, let the wave of the world rise or vanish of itself ; I suffer no increase, no decrease thereby.

मर्यनंतमहांभोधौ विश्वं नाम विकल्पना ॥
अतिशांतो निराकार एतदेवाहमास्थितः ॥ ३ ॥

3. On Me, the limitless Ocean, the world is merely superimposed. Highly tranquil, formless am I ; thus indeed do I remain.

नात्मा भावेषु नो भावस्तत्रानंते निरंजने ॥
इत्यसक्तोऽस्पृहः शांत एतदेवाहमास्थितः ॥ ४ ॥

4. The Atmā is not in the visible, nor is the visible in That which is unlimited and unblemished. Thus free from attachment, free for desire and tranquil, do I abide in my own Self.

अहो चिन्मात्रमेवाहमिंद्रजालोपमं जगत् ॥
अतो मम कर्थं कुत्र हेयोपादेयकल्पना ॥ ५ ॥

5. Oh ! I am Intelligence itself. The world is a juggler's show. How can then there be any notion of adoption or relinquishment here.

---

CHAPTER 8.

The Nature of Release and Bondage.

तदा बंधो यदा चित्तं किंचिद्वाञ्छति शोचति ॥
किंचिन्मुंचति गृह्णाति किंचिद्वृष्यति कुप्यति ॥१॥

1. Says the Teacher :—Then is bondage, when the mind wishes for anything, grieves at anything, renounces anything, takes anything, feels unhappy in anything, or is angry at anything.

तदा मुक्तिर्यदा चित्तं न वाञ्छति न शोचति ॥
न मुंचति न गृह्णाति न हृष्यति न कुप्यति ॥२॥

2. Then is release, when the mind wishes not, grieves not, abandons not, grasps not, feels not happy or unhappy at anything.

तदा बंधो यदा चित्तं सक्तं कास्वपि दृष्टिषु ॥
तदा मोक्षो यदा चित्तमसक्तं सर्वदृष्टिषु ॥ ३ ॥

3. Then is bondage, when the mind is attached to any condition whatever. Then is release, when the mind is unattached to all conditions whatsoever.

यदा नाहं तदा मोक्षो यदाहं बंधनं तदा ॥
मत्वेति हेलया किंचिन्मा गृहण विमुंच मा ॥४॥

4. When there is no "I" there is release, where there is "I" there is bondage. Knowing this, do not take or avoid anything in life! ——————

CHAPTER 9.

<sup>९१</sup>
Eight verses on Concernedness<sup>2</sup>.

कृताकृते च द्वंद्वानि कदा शांतानि कस्य वा ॥
एवं ज्ञात्वेह निर्वेदाद्वच त्यागपरोऽव्रती ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the Teacher :—Things done and not done, and pairs of opposites<sup>3</sup> when are they set at rest, and for whom ? Having known this, even here be thou, through unconcernedness intent on renunciation and free from all attachment whatsoever.

कस्यापि तात धन्यस्य लोकचेष्टावलोकनात् ॥
जीवितेच्छा बुभुक्षा च बुभुत्सोपशमं गताः ॥२॥

2. Who, my child, is the fortunate man, in whom, by dint of gazing at the world-show, lust of life, love of enjoyment and thirst for knowledge are set at rest ?

अनित्यं सर्वमेवेदं तापत्रितयदूषितम् ॥
असारं निंदितं हेयमिति निश्चित्य शाम्यति ॥३॥

(1) Speaking of the indications of the knowers of Brahma—says Rishi Jaigishavya. "Having cut asunder all knots of the heart, they roam about at pleasure. None is related to them nor are they related to any one. None is their enemy nor are they enemies of any one. Above praise and blame they are always at peace, ever bent upon the good of others." Maha-bharata—Speaking of Rishi Narada Krishna said, The practice of virtue does not beget in him that egotism which burns one's self. His actions correspond with his thoughts, therefore he is universally worshipped. Ever unattached to anything he looks like one attached. He never passes his time fruitlessly. His senses are under complete control. He never pray's into the defects of others but is always mindful of his own. Acquisition of objects of the world does not elate him, nor does their loss depress him. Of firm intellect, of an unconcerned disposition, he is worshipped everywhere."

(2) Nirveda.

(3) Pleasure and pain, gain and loss, good and evil, heaven and hell, etc.

3. Impermanent is all this, undermined by the threefold misery<sup>1</sup>, void of essence, full of blemish, fit to be cast away. Having realized this, one goes to peace.

कोऽसौ कालो वयः किं वा यत्र द्वंद्वानि नो नृणाम् ॥
तान्युपेक्ष्य यथाप्राप्तवर्ती सिद्धिमवाप्नुयात् ॥ ४ ॥

4. What is the time, what the age when pairs of opposites<sup>2</sup> do not exist for man ? Taking no heed of these, doing whatever offers, one attains to perfection.

नाना मतं महर्षिणां साधूनां योगिनां तथा ॥
द्वष्टवा निर्वेदमापन्नः को न शास्यति मानवः ॥५॥

5. Manifold are the doctrines of the great Sages, of Saints and Yogis as well. Having seen this and gained unconcernedness, what man may not come to peace ?

कृत्वा मूर्तिपरिज्ञानं चैतन्यस्य नकिंगुरुः ॥
निर्वेदसमतायुक्त्या यस्तारयति संस्तुतेः ॥ ६ ॥

6. Having gained full realization of the Conscious Essence by the practice of unconcernedness and equanimity, he who is an excellent teacher becomes a saviour of the world.

पश्य भूतविकारांस्त्वं भूतमात्रान् यथार्थतः ॥
तत्क्षणाद्बंधनिर्मुक्तः स्वरूपस्थो भविष्यसि ॥७॥

7. As soon as thou seest that the modifications of the elements<sup>3</sup> are nothing in truth but the basic ele-

(1) Adhyatmika, ādhibairika ādhikārikā i. e., from one's own self, from the gods (i. e., karma) and from physical nature.

(2) Pleasure and pain, heat and cold, &c.

(3) The world as composed of the five elements.

वासना एव संसार इति सर्वा विमुच्च ताः ॥
तत्यागो वासनात्यागात्स्थितिरथ्य यथा तथा ॥८॥

8. The world is nothing but vasana,<sup>1</sup> do thou disperse all these. The renunciation of the former<sup>2</sup> follows on the renunciation of the latter.<sup>3</sup> As his condition is now, thus he remains<sup>4</sup>.

CHAPTER 10.

Eight verses on Quietude.

विहाय वैरिणं काममर्थं चानर्थं संकुलम् ॥
धर्ममप्येत्योहेतुं सर्वत्रानादरं कुरु ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the Teacher:—Having forsaken Desire, the enemy, and woeful lust of wealth, as well as dharma (religious merit)<sup>5</sup> which gives rise to both, do thou cast off attachment and be indifferent to everything.

(1) The aggregate of accumulated mental (and emotional) impressions.

(2) i. e., of the world.

(3) i. e., of the vasanas.

(4) i. e., he lives in the world for working out the remainder of his Karma.

(5) The Vedanta holds that dharma (virtue) is as much a mental state as any other emotion concerning life in the world or hereafter and that for one who seeks emancipation, complete suppression of all emotion is the only course possible. The parting words of Narada to Suka therefore were—"Do thou relinquish dharma—virtue and adharma—vice, as well as truth and untruth. Having renounced both truth and untruth, do thou renounce that by which thou hast renounced these. Renounce dharma by suppression of the action of the mind, adharma by having no vicious thoughts, truth and untruth by knowledge and knowledge by ascertainment of the supreme." In the Absolute, virtue, vice, duty or the absence thereof finds no place. In the ordinary condition of life there are however two kinds of dharma—sakarma and niskarma (i. e., done with or without motive of reward). The former leads to the samsara, the latter prepares the way for moksha. Desire and lust of wealth arise from the former. In the final stage of gyana the latter has also to be renounced.

स्वमेंद्रजालवत्पश्य दिनानि त्रीणि पञ्च वा ॥

मित्रस्त्रेत्रधनागरदारादायादिसंपदः ॥ २ ॥

2. Know friends, lands, wealth, houses, wives, and affluence to be like things in a dream or a juggler's show, lasting but three or five days.

यत्र यत्र भवेत्तृष्णा संसारं विद्धि तत्र वै ॥

प्रौढैराग्यमाश्रित्य वीततृष्णः सुखी भव ॥ ३ ॥

3. Know the world to be there where is desire. Do thou betake thyself to firm non-attachment, be free from desire and happy.<sup>1</sup>

तृष्णामात्रात्मको बंधस्तन्नाशो मोक्ष उच्यते ॥

भवासंसक्तिमात्रेण प्राप्तितुष्टिमुहुर्मुहुः ॥ ४ ॥

4. Bondage consists only in desire, its destruction is release. Non-attachment to the visible, gradually leads to the happiness following realization of Self.

त्वमेकश्चेतनः शुद्धो जडं विश्वमसत्तथा ॥

अविद्यापि न किञ्चित्सा का बुभुत्सा तथापि ते ॥५॥

5. Thou art One, Intelligent, and Pure, the world is devoid of Intelligence and false. Avidyâ<sup>1</sup> itself is nothing, what thirst of knowledge can there be for thee?

राज्यं सुताः कलत्राणि शरीराणि सुखानि च ॥

संसक्तस्यापि नष्टानि तव जन्मनि जन्मनि ॥६॥

---

(1) Says Vyâsa :—"Running after sensual delights why dost thou not betake thyself to renunciation. Fool thou art that seest only the honey (at the top of the hill), not the abyss below. Fickle minded as thou art, be thou firm, fool as thou art, do thou betake thyself to wisdom. Agitated as thou art, be thou now at peace—devoid of knowledge of self as thou art, do thou be possessed of self-knowledge. Arise awake, ever on the alert are thy enemies within thee watching for opportunity to destroy thee. Why dost thou not hasten to destroy them"—(Mahabharata Moksha Dharma, Chap. 310).

6. Kingdoms, sons, wives, bodies and pleasures, have all been lost to thee, birth after birth, even though thou wast attached to them.

अलमर्थेन कामेन सुकृतेनापि कर्मणा ॥
एभ्यः संसारकांतारे न विश्रान्तमभून्मनः ॥ ७ ॥

7. Enough then, of love of wealth, desire and even good deeds. In none of these did the mind find rest in this forest of the world.

कृतं न कति जन्मानि कायेन मनसा गिरा ॥
वुःखमायासदं कर्म तदव्याप्युपरम्यताम् ॥ ८ ॥

8. For how many incarnations did'st thou not engage in action with body, mind and speech, all resulting in nothing but trouble ? Do thou now cease from action.

CHAPTER II.

Eight verses on Wisdom.

भावाभावलिकारश्च स्वभावादिति निश्चयी ॥
निर्विकारो गतक्षेत्रः सुखेनैवोपशास्यति ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the teacher : -- Existence and non-existence with their modifications are all due to the nature of things. Knowing this for certain, undisturbed, and free from pain, one finds peace easily.

ईदवरः सर्वनिर्माता नेहान्य इति निश्चयी ॥
अंतर्गलितसर्वाशः शांतः क्रापि न सज्जते ॥ २ ॥

2. It is God who is the Creator of all. There is none other here. Knowing this for certain, with desire set at rest within, one finds peace and is attached to nothing whatever.

आपदः संपदः काले दैवादेवेति निश्चयी ॥
तृष्णः स्वस्थेंद्रियो नित्यं न वाञ्छति न शोचति ॥३॥

3. Past action alone brings affluence and misery, each in its own turn. Knowing this, contented and with all organs of sense controlled, one desires nothing, nor feels grieved at anything.

सुखदुःखे जन्ममृत्यु दैवादेवेति निश्चयी ॥
साध्यादर्शी निरायासः कुर्वन्नपि न लिप्यते ॥४॥

4. Pleasure and pain, birth and death are due to past Karma. Knowing this for certain, as well as his inability to alter it, freed from anxiety, one is not stained even though engaged in action.

चिंतया जायते दुःखं नान्यथेहेति निश्चयी ॥
तया हीनः सुखी शांतः सर्वत्र गलितस्पृहः ॥५॥

5. Care alone breeds sorrow, nothing else does. Knowing this, above care, and happy, one finds peace and is free from all attachment whatever.

नाहं देहो न मे देहो बोधोऽहमिति निश्चयी ॥
कैवल्यमिव संप्राप्तो न स्मरत्यकृतं कृतम् ॥६॥

6. "I am not this body, nor is this body mine. I am intelligence itself." One who knows this for certain, attains to union<sup>1</sup> and does not remember what he has done or not done.

आब्रह्मस्तंषपर्यतमहमेवेति निश्चयी ॥
निर्विकल्पः शुचिः शांतः प्राप्ताप्राप्तविनिर्दृतः ॥७॥

7. "From Brahmá down to a blade of grass, I am verily all this," one who knows this for certain, is free from all conflicting thoughts, pure, at peace and indifferent to what is attained and what is not attained.

नानाश्र्यमिदं किञ्चिदिति निश्चयी ॥
निर्वासनः स्फूर्तिगात्रो न किञ्चिदिव शाम्यति ॥८॥

8. "This diversified and wonderful world is verily nothing." Knowing this, free from desire and specific cognition, one finds his rest.

CHAPTER 12.

Eight verses on realization of the same by the disciple..

कायकृत्यासहः पूर्वं ततो वाग्विस्तरासहः ॥
अथ चिंतासहस्तस्मादेवमेवाह मास्थितः ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the Disciple :—First I felt disinclined to bodily exertion, then to length of speech and finally to mental exertion. Even thus do I stand.

प्रीत्याभावेन शब्दादेरहश्यत्वेन चात्मनः ॥
विक्षेपैकायद्य एवमेवाहमास्थितः ॥ २ ॥

2. Because of sound,<sup>2</sup> &c., being no object of affection to me ; and because of the Atma being no object of

(1) With the Atma.

(2) Objects of sense.

cognition by the senses, my mind is free from distraction and is one-pointed. Even thus do I stand.<sup>1</sup>

समाध्यासा दिविक्षितौ व्यवहारः समाधये ॥

एवं विलोक्य नियममेवमेवाहमास्थितः ॥ ३ ॥

3. The practice conducive to Samadhi is the equableness in the distraction caused by superimposition and the rest. Knowing this to be the rule, thus do I stand.<sup>2</sup>

हेयोपादेयविरहादेवं हर्षविषादयोः ॥

अभावादद्य हे ब्रह्मन्नेवमेवाहमास्थितः ॥ ४ ॥

4. Having nothing to gain or lose, having no joy or sorrow, thus, O Knower of Brahman, do I stand.

आश्रमानाश्रमं ध्यानं चित्तस्वीकृतवर्जनम् ॥

विकल्पं मम विक्ष्यैतैरेवमेवाहमास्थितः ॥ ५ ॥

5. The rules of the order, the condition of those who have left their order, meditation and the relinquishment of what has been acquired, knowing all these to be so many distractions to me, thus do I abide in my own Self.

कर्मनुष्टानमज्ञानाद्यथैवोपरमस्तथा ॥

बुध्वा सम्यगिदं तत्त्वमेवमेवाहमास्थितः ॥ ६ ॥

(1) The sense is that the atma being beyond mind, is not an object of meditation and there is thus for me no distraction due to such mental contemplation. On the contrary I abide in my own self, free from all thoughts, all distraction.

(2) Samadhi is resorted to for removal of the wrong notion of 'I am the body' or 'I am the doer' and the distraction caused thereby. But when the sage has realized that he is not the body nor the doer or enjoyer of action, what need is there for him to engage in Samadhi?

6. The performance of action is as much due to ignorance (avidyā) as the cessation thereof. Knowing this well, thus do I stand.

अचिंत्यं चिंत्यमानोऽपि चिंतारूपं भजत्यसौ ॥

त्यक्त्वा तद्वावनं तस्मादेवमेवाहमास्थितः ॥७॥

7. Meditating upon that which is not an object of meditation, one only betakes himself to an action of the mind. Having relinquished this notion, I now stand where I am<sup>1</sup>.

एवमेव कृतं येन स कृतार्थो भवेदसौ ॥

एवमेव स्वभावो यः स कृतार्थो भवेदसौ ॥८॥

8. He who has accomplished this has achieved all that had to be achieved, what need be said of one who by nature is such ?<sup>2</sup>

CHAPTER 13.

Seven verses on Happiness.

अकिञ्चनभवं स्वास्थ्यं कौपीनत्वेऽपि दुर्लभम् ॥

त्यागादाने विहायास्मादहमासे यथा सुखम् ॥१॥

(1) 'I am Brahman' is as much an action of the mind as 'I am the body' and must be suppressed like any other thought.

1. Says the Disciple :—That tranquillity of mind which results from the absence of all attachment whatever, is difficult to attain even when there is the slightest attachment to the smallest object, such as a piece of cloth used for tying round the waist. Having therefore given up both search and relinquishment, I live happy.

कुत्रापि खेदः कायस्य जिह्वा कुत्रापि खिद्यते ॥
मनः कुत्रापि तत्त्यक्त्वा पुरुषार्थे स्थितः सुखम् ॥२॥

2. There is trouble of the body somewhere,<sup>1</sup> trouble of the mind somewhere,<sup>2</sup> and trouble of speech somewhere ;<sup>3</sup> having relinquished all these, do I live happy in my own Self.

कृतं किमपि नैव स्थादिति संचित्य तत्त्वतः ॥
यदा यत्कर्तुमायाति तत्कृत्वासे यथा सुखम् ॥३॥

3. Nothing done by the body and the organs of sense is done by the Atma. Having known this truth, I do what comes before me and am happy.

कर्मनैष्कर्म्यनिर्बधभावा देहस्थयोगिनः ॥
संयोगायोगविरहादहमासे यथा सुखम् ॥ ४ ॥

4. Inclination to action or cessation of action is for the yogi who has attached to the body. Having relinquished both attachment and non-attachment, I am happy.

(1) In fasts and penance.

(2) In study.

(3) In repetition of sacred Mantras.

अर्थानयौ न मे स्थित्या गत्या न शयनैन वा ॥
तिष्ठन् गच्छन् स्वपन् तस्मादहमासे यथा सुखम् ॥५॥

5. Sitting, going or sleeping I gain and lose nothing. Therefore standing, moving or sleeping, I live happy.

स्वपतो नास्ति मे हानिः सिद्धिर्यत्पतो न वा ॥
नाशोलासौ विहायास्मदहमासे यथा सुखम् ॥६॥

6. Sleeping I lose nothing, striving I gain nothing. Having therefore relinquished gain and loss, I am happy.

सुखादिरूपानियमं भावेवालोक्य भूरिशः ॥
शुभाशुभे विहायास्मादहमासे यथा सुखम् ॥७॥

7. Having repeatedly felt the instability of both pleasure and pain in each successive birth, I have renounced both good and evil and am happy<sup>(1)</sup>.

CHAPTER 14.

Four verses on the disciple's condition of bliss.

प्रकृत्या गून्यचित्तो यः प्रमादाज्ञावभावनः ॥
निद्रितो बोधित इव क्षीणसंसरणो हि सः ॥१॥

1. Says the Disciple :—He becomes verily world-exhausted whose mind has naturally become vacant of all thought, who becomes conscious of external existence only through heedlessness, and who though asleep is in reality awake<sup>1</sup>.

(1) Says Vashista to Rama. "Do thou make thy mind vacant of all thought and function in the outside world to a limited extent only and be क धनानि क मित्राणि क मे विषयदस्यतः ॥

क शास्त्रं क च विज्ञानं यदा मे गलिता स्पृहा ॥२॥

2. For me where are riches, friends and those thieves known as object of sense, where is shastra or its knowledge, when all desire has ceased to exist in me ?

विज्ञाते साक्षिपुरुषे परमात्मनि चेद्वरे ॥
नैरादये बंधमोक्षेच न चिंता मुक्तये मम ॥३॥

3. When I have realized the Witness, the Supreme Self, the Lord, and when all longing for release and bondage has gone, there is no anxiety for emancipation.

अंतर्विकल्पशून्यस्य बहिः स्वच्छंदचारिणः ॥
भ्रातस्येव दशास्तास्तास्तादृशा एव जानते ॥४॥

4. The condition of one whose mind has ceased to act, but who roams about in the world like one under an illusion, can only be known by one like himself. <sup>2</sup> inside as if in deep sleep. Thus " thou be free from all sorrow. Make thy deep slumber thy waking condition and thy waking condition thy deep slumber—That which remains in the union of the two, is thy own Pure Self." Or as said by Sri Krishna in the Gita " That which is night to all other creatures, is day to the sage whose mind has been brought under complete control, that in which other creatures are awake, is night to one who sees his own self."

(2) One of the questions which troubles most readers of Vedanta is :— " How shall I live, if I give up all sense of egoism." The answer is that complete cessation of all sense of the I in the body &c. is possible only in the final stage of Gyana which is seedless meditation.—Nirvikalpa Samadhi. In the previous stages such sense of I becomes attenuated, but every step towards such attenuation is a step forward. This is the experience of all Vedantins past and present.

CHAPTER 15.

Twenty verses on knowledge of the Self.

यथा तथोपदेशेन कृतार्थः सत्त्वबुद्धिमान् ॥
आजीवमपि जिज्ञासुः परस्तत्र विमुद्यति ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the Teacher :—The man of pure intellect achieves his object by even instruction imparted in an accidental manner, but to one of impure intellect, even repeated instruction does not prevent from going astray.

मोक्षो विषयैरस्यं बंधो वैषयिको रसः ॥
एतावदेव विज्ञानं यथेच्छसि तथा कुरु ॥ २ ॥

2. Distaste for objects of sense is release, love of objects of sense is bondage. This is knowledge, do thou act as thou chodest.

वाग्मिप्राज्ञमहोयोगं जनं मूकजडालसम् ॥
करोति तत्त्वबोधोऽयमतस्त्यक्तो बुभुश्वभिः ॥ ३ ॥

3. This knowledge makes the eloquent mute, the wise unwise, the active inactive. Therefore lovers of objects of sense shun it.<sup>1</sup>

(1) It is not that the eloquent are deprived of their power of speech, or they become fools, or the busy inactive by acquiring Brahma Vidyā, but that their activity which was formerly directed towards the world of sense, is now directed towards self-realization. Had the object of the Vedānta been to make men idiotic idlers, it would not have given us teachers like Krishna, Bishnu, Vyasa and Sankara. On the contrary the knower of Brahman, though himself released, yet comes into the world as often as is required, to fulfil the moral law. The Vedānta does not tell the sage to go about in the world behaving like a child or an idiot or like one in a dream. But it requires that like a child he should be simple and guileless in his ways, and should have no thought of the past or the future and should value things of the world like those of a dream. All that it does is to strike at the root of all sense of egotism, all pride of learning, possession and race, in the earlier stages, and of all sense of "I" and "mine" in the body and its surroundings, later on. The Bhagwadgītā and the Yogavāshishtha, two of the most authoritative books of Vedānta, are the works of men who

न त्वं देहो न ते देहो भोक्ता कर्ता न वा भवान् ॥
चिद्रूपोऽसि सदा साक्षी निरपेक्षः सुखं चर ॥४॥

4. Thou art not the body, nor is the body thine, nor art thou an actor or enjoyer. Thou art Intelligence itself, the Ever Witness, the Ever Free. Do thou roam happy.

रागद्वेषौ मनोधर्मौ न मनस्ते कदाचन ॥
निर्विकल्पोऽसिबोधात्मा निर्विकारः सुखं चर ॥५॥

5. Attachment and aversion are conditions of the mind, the mind is never thine. Free from all distraction, thou art Intelligence itself, without change, do thou be happy.

सर्वभूतेषु चात्मानं सर्वभूतानि चात्मानि ॥
विज्ञाय निरहंकारो निर्ममस्त्वं सुखी भव ॥६॥

6. Knowing thy own self to be in all beings, and all beings in thy own self, free from all sense of "I" or "mine," do thou be happy.

विद्वं स्फुरति यत्रेदं तरंगा इव सागरे ॥
तत्त्वमेव न संदेहश्चिन्मूर्ते विज्वरो भव ॥७॥

7. That in which the world rises like waves in the ocean, that verily art thou, O thou Supreme Intelligence, be thou free from all fever.

were as active for the good of society as in realization of the Self within them as the Self of all. In the final stages of gyána, action of either the mind or the body becomes well nigh impossible. As said by Krishna in the Gitá, "for the aspirant after yoga action is necessary. For one who has reached it cessation of action is necessary." But that is not the stage of work, but of absorption in the Self, after which the body does not last but for a few days. A misapprehension of this truth has led many into pitfalls and produced results never contemplated by the Shastras.

श्रद्धस्व तात श्रद्धस्व नात्र मोहं कुरुष्व भोः ॥
ज्ञानस्वरूपो भगवानात्मा त्वं प्रकृतेः परः ॥ ८ ॥

8. Have faith, my son, have faith, do not delude thyself here. Thou art Intelligence, thou art the Lord, thou the Self, beyond Prakriti.

गुणैः संवेष्टितो देहस्तिष्ठत्यायाति याति च ॥
आत्मा न गंता नागंता किमेनमनु शोचसि ॥९॥

9. The body covered with the organs of sense &c., comes and goes. The Atmá (Self) neither comes nor goes, why dost thou grieve for it (the Atmá).

देहस्तिष्ठतु कल्पांतं गच्छत्वयैव वा पुनः ॥
क वृद्धिः क च वा हानिस्तव चिन्मात्ररूपिणः ॥१०॥

10. Let the body last till the end of a Kalpa (cycle) or go this very day, what increase or decrease is there in thee, the very Self of intelligence ?

त्वय्यनंतमहाभोधी विश्ववीचिः स्वभावतः ॥
उदेतु वास्तमायातु न ते वृद्धिर्न वा क्षतिः ॥११॥

11. Let the waves of the world rise or fall in Thee, the limitless ocean, there is neither increase nor decrease in Thee.

तात चिन्मात्ररूपोऽसि न ते भिन्नमिदं जगत् ॥
अतः कस्य कथं कुत्र हेयोपादेय कल्पना ॥ १२ ॥

12. Thou art, my son, Intelligence itself. The world is no other than thee. Therefore whose and whence is here desire or aversion ?

एकस्मिन्नव्यये शांते चिदाकाशेऽमले त्वयि ॥
कुतो जन्म कुतो कर्म कुतोऽहंकार एव च ॥१३॥

13. In Thee, the One, free from decay, Bliss itself, the Absolute Intelligence, the Ever Pure, where is birth or action or the sense of the “I” ?

यत्वं पद्यसि तत्रैकस्त्वमेव प्रतिभासते ॥
किं पृथक् भासते स्वर्णात्कटकांगदनूपुरम् ॥१४॥

14. What thou seest, there thou alone art seen. Are bangles, armlets or trinkets other than gold ?

अयं सोऽहमयं नाहं विभागमिति संत्यज ॥
सर्वमात्मेति निश्चित्य निःसंकल्प सुखी भव ॥१५॥

15. “I am this,” “I am not this”, do thou leave off this sense of separateness. Realizing that all this is Atmá, be thou free of all mental conditions and be happy.

तत्वैवाज्ञानतो विश्वं त्वमेकः परमार्थतः ॥
तत्त्वोऽन्यो नास्ति संसारी नासंसारी च कक्षन् ॥१६॥

16. This world springs verily from thy own illusion. In truth thou alone art one. There is no other embodied Self (Jiva) than thee, nor one who is beyond the Sansara.

आतिमात्रमिदं विश्वं न किंचिदिति निश्चयी ॥
निर्वासनः स्फूर्तिमात्रो न किंचिदिव शाम्यति ॥१७॥

17.. This world is but a delusion. One who knows this, finds peace ; all longing gone, he abides in supreme consciousness and finds rest as if in nothing.*<sup>1</sup>

---

* i.e., Freed of all specific cognition whatever.

एक एव भवांभोधावासीदस्ति भविष्यति ॥
न ते बंधोऽस्ति मोक्षो वा कृतकृत्यः सुखं चर ॥१८॥

18. In the great ocean of the visible, One alone is, was and shall be. For thee there is no release, no bondage, with all desires fulfilled, be thou happy.

मा संकल्पविकल्पाभ्यां चित्तं क्षोभय चिन्मय ॥
उपशाम्य सुखं तिष्ठ स्वात्मन्यानं दविग्रहे ॥१९॥

19. O thou Supreme Intelligence ! Do not trouble thy mind with conflicting thoughts. Do thou find rest and be happy in thy own self, the embodiment of bliss.

त्यजैव ध्यानं सर्वत्र मा किंचिद्भूदि धारय ॥
आत्मा त्वं मुक्त एवासि किं विमृश्य करिष्यसि ॥२०॥

20. Give up all meditation, carry nothing in thy heart. Thou art verily the Self, free from bondage, what shall meditation do for thee ?

CHAPTER 16.

Eleven verses on special instruction.

आचक्ष्व श्रृणु वा तात नानाशास्त्राण्यनेकशः ॥
तथापि न तव स्वास्थ्यं सर्वविस्मरणादते ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the Teacher :-Thou may'st, my son, discourse upon repeatedly, or hear diverse Sastras, but there is no peace for thee but through universal forgetfulness <sup>1</sup>.

(1) The last word of the Brahma Vidyā is Silence. "This Atma is silence" (Santoyam Atmā). It is in silence that you realize that before which even the sovereignty of the three worlds appears like a blade of grass. All instruction, all knowledge, whether of this or the world to come,

भोगं कर्म समाधिं वा कुरु विज्ञ तथापि ते ॥
चित्तं निरस्तर्लवाशमत्यर्थं रोचयिष्यति ॥ २ ॥

2. Armed with self knowledge thou may'st enjoy objects (of the world) or engage in action or betake thyself to meditation, but, O sage, thy mind will ever be attracted towards That which transcends all objects.

आयासात्सकलो दुःखी नैनं जानाति कद्चन ॥
अनेनैवोपदेशेन धन्यः प्राप्नोति निर्वृतिम् ॥ ३ ॥

3. All exertion causes pain, but no one knows it to be so. Blessed is he who gets peace from this very lesson.

व्यापारे खियते यस्तु निमेषोन्मेषयोरपि ॥
तस्यालस्यधुरीणस्य मुखं नान्यस्य कस्यचित् ॥४॥

4. He who feels even the motion of his eyelids to be a burden, even to such a one who is skilled in inaction, is there happiness, to no one else.

are in the realm of the finite and the phenomenal. All that is possible in the realm of the absolute is negation of the finite. The rest is silence. Says Vashishtha "May I be this, or may I have this, is the world. The disappearance of this notion is Moksha. Just as a drop of oil does not cling to a mirror, but immediately flows down, in the same manner when the mind has become freed of this notion of "may I be this," the world ceases to cling to it. It is memory which is the cause of the world. The suppression of the recollection of both things known and unknown, is supreme felicity. This universal forgetfulness is attained by no other means but knowledge of Self ; when the mind ceases to be mind, i. e., function both in and outside itself. When such a stage is reached, then all bonds are destroyed, "With uplifted arms do I cry," says Vashishtha, but do no one hears me. Making the mind free of all thought (vacant) is supreme bliss, why do you not strive for it ?" It is however not given to every one to attain to such a condition. This is the sixth stage of knowledge which if it is attained after many incarnations is considered to be a blessing. In this stage for the Yogi or Gyani not only the visible, but also all functions of his own mind cease to exist and like fire without fuel he attains to Nirvana. This is the universal forgetfulness spoken of in this section. The whole of the Vedanta Philosophy from the Upanishads downwards has this object in view and the last word of the Philosophy is "where one sees not another, hears not another, cognizes not another, that is Bhuma (infinity) immensity, bliss, immortality. All else is finite, perishable painful." So conclude the Upanishads.

इदं कृतमिदं नेति द्वंद्वमुक्तं यदा मनः ॥ ३ ॥
धर्मार्थकाममोक्षेषु निरपेक्षं तदा भवेत् ॥ ५ ॥

5. "This has been done," "this has not been done," when the mind is free from these conflicting thoughts, it becomes indifferent to virtue, wealth, pleasure and release.

विरक्तो विषयद्रेष्टा रागी विषयलोलुपः ॥
ग्रहमोक्षविहीनस्तु न विरक्तो न रागवान् ॥ ६ ॥

6. The ascetic avoids objects of sense, the man of the world runs after them, but he who is free from both, neither runs after them nor avoids them.

हेर्योपादेयता तावत्संसारविटपांकुरः ॥
स्मृहा जीवति यावद्वै निर्विचारदशास्पदम् ॥ ७ ॥

7. So long as desire, the offspring of ignorance is alive, so long there is attachment and aversion, the seed and the sprout of the tree of the Sansára.

प्रवृत्तौ जायते रागो निवृत्तौ द्वेष एव हि ॥
निर्द्वंद्वो बालवच्छीमानेवमेव व्यवस्थितः ॥ ८ ॥

8. Action breeds attachment. Cessation from action leads to aversion. The man of wisdom free from both these opposites is, like a child, above both.

हातुमिच्छति संसारं रागी दुःखजिहासया ॥
वीतरागो हि निर्दुःखस्तस्मिन्नपि न खिद्यति ॥ ९ ॥

9. One attached to the world longs for renunciation to get rid of his trouble. But one without attachment is free from sorrow, and is not unhappy even by living in the world.

यस्याभिमानो मोक्षेऽपि देहेऽपि ममता तथा ॥
न च ज्ञानी न वा योगी केवलं दुःखभागस्तौ ॥१०॥

10. One who even in the state of release is as much conscious of it as he is of his body, is neither a Sage nor a Yogi, but is verily destined to be unhappy.

हरो यद्युपदेष्टा ते हरिः कमलजोऽपि वा ॥
तथापि न तव स्वास्थ्यं सर्वविस्मरणाद्वते ॥११॥

11. Let Mahádeva or Vishnu or Brahmá himself be thy preceptor, but there is no peace for thee, except in universal forgetfulness.<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER 17.

Twenty verses on the condition of the knower of Self.

तेन ज्ञानफलं प्राप्तं योगाभ्यासफलं तथा ॥
तृष्णः स्वच्छेंद्रियो नित्यमेकाकी रमते तु यः ॥१॥

1. Says the Teacher :—He has verily gained the fruit of knowledge, and the fruit of the practice of Yoga, who self-contained, with senses purified, ever remains in seclusion.

न कदाचिज्जगत्यस्मिन् तत्त्वज्ञो हंत खिद्यति ॥
यत एंकेन तेनेदं पूर्णं ब्रह्मांडमंडलम् ॥ २ ॥

(1) Says Vashishtha. "Taking its stand upon the teaching of the Shastras that nothing here is, the mind becomes free from sorrow, and seeing the world as if it were not, it leaves off its vicious character, i. e., is merged into the átman," a teaching which should be realized to be appreciated.

2. The knower of truth never feels unhappy in this world, because he by his own Self pervades the whole of this universe.

न जातु विषयाः केऽपि स्वारामं हर्षयन्त्यभी ॥
सल्लकीपल्लवप्रीतमिवेभं निंबपल्लवाः ॥ ३ ॥

3. These objects of the senses never afford delight to one who finds satisfaction in his own Self. The leaves of the nim tree afford no satisfaction to the elephant who loves to feed upon the leaves of the Salaki tree.

यस्तु भोगेषु भुक्तेषु न भवत्यधिवासिता ॥ अभुक्तेषु निराकांक्षी तादशो भवदुर्लभः ॥ ४ ॥

4. One who does not cherish affection for things known, nor runs after those unknown, is rare in the world.

बुभुक्षुरिह संसारे मुमुक्षुरपि दृश्यते ॥
भोगमोक्षनिराकांक्षी विरलो हि महाशयः ॥ ५ ॥

5. The man of pleasure as well as the aspirant of release are both found in this world. But the great soul who does not care for either, is rare in the world.

धर्मार्थकाममोक्षेषु जीविते मरणे तथा ॥
कस्याप्युदारचित्तस्य हेयोपादेयता न हि ॥ ६ ॥

6. It is only some one of great soul who has neither love nor hatred for Dharma (virtue), wealth (Artha) pleasure (Kám), emancipation (Moksha), life or death.

वांछा न विद्वविलये न द्वेषस्तस्य च स्थितौ ॥
यथा जीविकया तस्माद्धन्य आस्ते यथासुखम् ॥७॥

7. He who feels no anxiety for the cessation of earthly life nor aversion towards its continuance, but takes what comes in the course of things, is happy.

कृतार्थेऽनेन ज्ञानेनेत्येवं गलितधीः कृती ॥
पश्यन् शृण्वन् स्पृशन् जिग्नश्चनन्नास्ते यथासुखम् ॥८॥

8. Having attained his object with the knowledge of Self, with his mind absorbed in it, he lives happy, whether seeing, hearing, touching, smelling or eating.

शून्या हृष्टिर्था चेष्टा विकलार्नीद्रियाणि च ॥
न स्पृहा न विरक्तिर्वा क्षीणसंसारसागरे ॥ ९ ॥

9. To the person for whom this ocean of world has become dried up, action of the mind becomes objectless, action of the body fruitless and action of the senses automatic.<sup>1</sup>

न जागर्ति न निद्राति नोन्मीलति न मीलति ॥
अहो परदशा क्वापि वर्तते मुक्तचेतसः ॥ १० ॥

(1) "Let this be so." "May I have or be this." This thought is the world, (Samsara) and the absence thereof through universal forgetfulness, the place of peace. This is the finale of the Vedanta. Therefore the mind of the knower of Self, even if it acts, does not in reality act. He discharges the functions of the body and senses without being moved by them. He is so to speak oblivious to the world around him. What to others is day, is night to him. He is freed of both attachment and aversion. Renunciation does not consist in cessation of action of the senses or the mind but the absence of attachment thereto. "The great renouncer", says Vashishtha, "is he who has detached himself from and has renounced through the intellect, both Dharma and Adharma, (virtue and vice), pleasure and pain, life and death,—whose desires, and doubts, actions and conclusions are all set at rest, who has ceased to identify himself with the pleasures and pains of the body, and the senses, who knows that he is not the body, nor is this body his."

10. Oh ! wonderful is the condition of the truly liberated soul who is neither awake nor asleep, neither winking nor not winking.

सर्वत्र दृश्यते स्वस्थः सर्वत्र विमलाशयः ॥
समस्तवासनामुक्तो मुक्तः सर्वत्र राजते ॥ ११ ॥

11. At peace everywhere, with a pure heart, free from all desire, he the freed soul, shines everywhere.

पश्यन् शृण्वन् स्पृशन् जिग्नेयनन्वदन् व्रजन् ॥
ईहितानीहितैर्मुक्तो मुक्त एव महाशयः ॥ १२ ॥

12. Seeing, hearing, touching, smelling, eating, taking, speaking and moving, the sage is free from both attachment and aversion. The man of great soul is verily free.

न निंदति न च स्तौति न हृष्यति न कुप्यति ॥
न ददाति न गृह्णाति मुक्तः सर्वत्र नीरसः ॥१३॥

13. The man of liberated soul neither blames nor praises, is neither happy nor grieved, neither takes nor gives. He is ever free from attachment.

सानुरागां द्वियां दृष्ट्वा मृत्युं वा समुपस्थितम् ॥
अविह्वलमनाः स्वस्थो मुक्त एव महाशयः ॥१४॥

14. At the sight of a woman full of love or on the approach of death, the man of great soul is ever unmoved. He is verily free.

सुखे दुःखे नरे नार्या संपत्सु च विपत्सु च ॥
विशेषो नैव धीरस्य सर्वत्र समदर्शिनः ॥ १५ ॥

15. Pleasure and pain, man and woman, affluence and poverty make no difference to the sage, who sees unity everywhere.

न हिंसा नैव कास्यं नौद्रत्यं न च दीनता ॥
नाश्र्वं नैव च क्षोभः क्षीणसंसरणेऽनरे ॥ १६ ॥

16. For one to whom the world has ceased to exist, neither is there causing of injury, nor forgiveness, neither pride nor dejection, neither wonder nor perturbation of spirit.

न मुक्तो विषयद्वेष्टा न वा विषयलोलुपः ॥
असंसक्तमना नित्यं प्राप्ताग्रात्मुपाशनुते ॥ १७ ॥

17. The released soul neither shuns objects of sense, nor hankers after them, with a mind ever unattached, he takes what comes.

समाधानासमाधानहिताहितविकल्पना ॥
शून्यचित्तो न जानाति कैवल्यमिव संस्थितः ॥१८॥

18. One whose mind has ceased to act, knows neither suppression of the mind nor action thereof, neither its running after the pleasurable, nor avoiding the painful. He abides in unity.

निर्ममो निरहंकारो न किञ्चिदिति निश्चितः ॥
अंतर्गलितसर्वाशः कुर्वन्नपि करोति न ॥ १९ ॥

19. Free from all sense of "I" or "mine" and realizing that all is nothing, with all desires at rest, though doing he is not doing.

मनःप्रकाशसंमोहस्वभजाद्यविवर्जितः ॥
दशां कामपि संप्राप्तो भवेद्विलितमानसः ॥ २० ॥

20. He whose mind has become merged in the self (Atmā) is free from specific cognition, dream and dullness. He attains to a condition which is indescribable.<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER 18.

Hundred verses on Peace.

यस्य बोधोदये तावत्स्वभवद्वति भ्रमः ॥
तस्मै सुखैकरूपाय नमः शांताय तेजसे ॥ १ ॥

1. Says the Teacher :—Reverence to That upon the rising of the knowledge of which this illusory world becomes a dream, to That whose nature is verily bliss itself, which is ever serene, ever effulgent.

अर्जयित्वाऽखिलानर्थान् भोगानामोति पुष्कलान् ॥
न हि सर्वपरित्यागमंतरेण सुखी भवेत् ॥ २ ॥

2. One derives pleasure through attainment of worldly objects. But without universal renunciation he does not become happy.

(1) The condition of the knower of Self can only be known to himself or to one like himself, and then also by long companionship. The question was lately put to a Vedantin and the reply was that knowledge of Brahman is more an object of self realization than capable of being known to others and yet said he, there are some indications of the wise which are unmissable. When all sense of "I" or mine is gone, desire, aversion, passion, pride, delusion, hankering after worldly objects, and causing pain to others in thought and deed, all disappear. If ever any of these succeeds in asserting its sway, like a line drawn on sand or over the surface of water, it is only asserted to disappear at the next moment. Peace, contentment, cheerfulness, resignation, absence of all thought of Self, humility, and universal love reign supreme, and the sage has a kind word, a kind look, a kind thought and kind action for every body. The latest case in point is that of Swami Ram Tirtha who has just passed away. His was a personality never to be forgotten. An embodiment of unselfish love, ever bright, ever smiling, be inspired love wherever he went.

कर्तव्यदुःखमार्तडज्वालादग्धांतरात्मनः ॥
कुतः प्रशमपीयूषधारासारमृते सुखम् ॥ ३ ॥

3. To one whose mind is being scorched by the heat of the sun of things to be done, where is peace except in its being watered by the showers of the ambrosia of contentment?

भवोऽयं भावनामात्रो न किंचित्परमार्थतः ॥
नास्त्यभावः स्वभावानां भावाभावविभाविनाम् ।४।

4. The phenomenal is nothing but a state of consciousness. In reality it has no existence. The entities which experience existence and non-existence never cease to be.<sup>1</sup>

न दूरं न च संकोचाल्पब्धमेवात्मनः पदम् ॥
निर्विकल्पं निरायासं निर्विकारं निरंजनम् ॥ ५ ॥

5. Not far off, nor limited, ever present is the Atmá free from all distraction, all sorrow, all change, and all blemish.

व्यामोहमात्रविरतौ स्वरूपादानमात्रतः
वीतशोका विराजंते निरावरणदृष्टयः ॥ ६ ॥

(1) The world is but a reflex of the mind, and the only difference between the world of dream and the world of the waking condition, is that in the one the mind acts in what it has created in itself; in the other upon what it has projected out of itself. The notion of the I, is coexistent with the mind. With the disappearance of the I, the world ceases to exist and what is left is not nothing or vacuity, but pure consciousness which only those who realize it know to be the only reality. Therefore the entity which experiences both existence and non-existence is not the mind but the Self (Atmá) which never ceases to be. In other words—that which connects two states of consciousness is the Atmá or Brahman.

6. Through mere disappearance of illusion, through mere allowance of self, shine those of clear vision with all sorrow gone !

समस्तं कल्पनामात्रमात्मा मुक्तः सनातनः ॥
इति विज्ञाय धीरो हि किमभ्यस्यति बालवत् ॥७॥

7. All this is merely an action of the mind. The Atmā is ever free, everlasting ; knowing this, will the sage engage in action like a child ?

आत्मा ब्रह्मेति निश्चित्य भावाभावौ च कालिपतौ ॥
निष्कामः किं विजानाति किं ब्रूते च करोति किम् ।८।

8. Knowing that his own self is Brahman, and existence and non-existence are due to superimposition alone, what should one who is free from desire, know, say or do ?

अयं सोऽहमयं नाहमिति क्षीणा विकल्पनाः ॥
सर्वमात्मेति निश्चित्य तूष्णींभूतंस्य योगिनः ॥९॥

9. "This is I" "This is not I," such notions do not trouble the Yogi who knowing that all is Self, has become silent.

न विक्षेपो न चैकाग्र्यं नातिबोधो न मूढता ॥
न सुखं न च वा दुःखमुपशांतस्य योगिनः ॥१०॥

---

(1) There are three states of the Self, (1) where he identifies himself with and acts in the body, the organs of senses and the mind, (2) where having drawn himself inwards, he acts in a world of his own creation as in a dream, (3) where he abides in his own true self which is beginningless and endless. The first two are the domain of Avidyā or illusion and should be got rid of by knowledge. The last is that in which one should ever seek to abide. Like a blacksmith cutting a piece of hot iron with cold steel, he should make a mind full of peace and renunciation cut a mind burning with desire.

10. For the Yogi who has found peace, there is no distraction, no concentration, no excess of knowledge, no ignorance, no pleasure, no pain.

स्वाराज्ये भैक्ष्यवृत्तौ च लाभालाभे जने वने ॥
निर्विकल्पस्वभावस्य न विशेषोऽस्ति योगिनः ॥११॥

11. To the Yogi whose mind has ceased to act, ruling a kingdom or going about as a beggar, gain or loss, living in society or in solitude, makes no difference.

क धर्मः क च वा कामः क चार्थः क विवेकता ॥
इदं कृतमिदं नेति द्वंद्वमुक्तस्य योगिनः ॥ १२ ॥

12. Where is virtue, where pleasure, where wealth, where knowledge, where the sense of this has been done, this not, for the Yogi who is free from all sense of duality<sup>1</sup> ?

कृत्यं किमपि नैवास्ति न कापि हृदि रंजना ॥
यथा जीवनमेवेह जीवन्मुक्तस्य योगिनः ॥१३॥

13. For the Yogi who is released even in this life, who takes things as they come, there is nothing whatever to do, no yearning for anything whatever.

क मोहः क च वा विश्वं क तञ्चथानं क मुक्तता ॥
सर्वसंकल्पसीमायां विश्रांतस्य महात्मनः ॥ १४ ॥

14. Where is delusion, where the world, where any thought thereof, where release from it for the man of great soul who has found his rest in the goal of all desire (Brahman) ?

---

(1) Dwanda is really equal to "relativity" as opposed to "unity" or absolute.

येन विश्वमिदं दृष्टं स नास्तीति करोतु वै ॥
निर्वासनः किं कुरुते पश्यन्नपि न पश्यति ॥१५॥

15. One who sees the world may deny its existence. But what does one who has no desire, to do ? Seeing he does not see.

येन दृष्टं परं ब्रह्म सोऽहं ब्रह्मेति चिंतयेत् ॥
किं चिंतयति निश्चिन्तो द्वितीयं यो न पश्यति ॥१६॥

16. He who sees the Supreme Brahman (as separate from himself) may meditate upon " I am Brahman." But what can the Sage who has transcended thought itself meditate upon when he sees no duality ?

दृष्टो येनात्मविक्षेपो निरोधं कुरुते त्वसौ ॥
उदारस्तु न विक्षिप्तः साध्याभावात्करोति किम् ॥१७॥

17. He who has seen distraction in the Self, may engage in controlling it. The man of the great soul is not distracted. Having nothing to accomplish, what is there for him to do ?

धीरो लोकविपर्यस्तो वर्त्तमानोऽपि लोकवत् ॥
न समाधिं न विक्षेपं न लेपं स्वस्य पश्यति ॥१८॥

18. The sage though acting like the ordinary man of the world, is yet free from its anxieties. He sees for himself neither concentration of the mind nor its distraction, nor attachment to anything.

भावाभावविहीनो यस्तृप्तो निर्वासनो बुधः ॥
नैव किंचित्कृतं तेन लोकदृष्ट्या त्रिकुर्वता ॥१९॥

19. The man of wisdom who is free from all sense of existence and non-existence, who is self satisfied and is free from all desires, does nothing even though he may be acting in the sight of the world,

प्रवृत्तौ वा निवृत्तौ वा नैव धीरस्य दुर्घटः ॥
यदा यत्कर्तुमायाति तत्कृत्वा तिष्ठतः सुखम् ॥२०॥

20. For the man of firm intellect there is no anxiety either for action or inaction, he does what comes to him and is ever happy.

निर्वासनो निरालंबः स्वच्छंदो मुक्तवंधनः ॥
क्षिप्तः संस्कारवातेन चेष्टते शुष्कपर्णिवत् ॥ २१ ॥

21. Above all attachment and thought of action, free and with all his fetters broken, he moves impelled by the activity of his past karma, like a dry leaf impelled by the wind.

असंसारस्य तु क्वापि न हर्षो न विषादता ॥
स शीतलमना नित्यं विदेह इव राजते ॥ २२ ॥

22. For one who has found his way out of the Sansara, there is no joy, no sorrow ; ever cool and calm, he lives as if he were without a body.

कुत्रापि न जिहासास्ति नाशो वापि न कुत्रचित् ॥
आत्मारामस्य धीरस्य शीतलाञ्छतरात्मनः ॥२३॥

23. For one who finds his happiness in his own self, whose mind is calm and pure, there is no desire for renunciation nor any expectation whatever.

प्रकृत्या शून्यचित्तस्य कुर्वतोऽस्य यदृच्छया ॥
प्राकृतस्येव धीरस्य न मानो नावमानता ॥२४॥

24. For one who is self-controlled, whose mind does not act, whose actions are impelled only by past Karma, there is neither honor nor dishonor, even though he may be acting like an ordinary person.

कृतं देहेन कर्मेदं न मया शुद्धरूपिणा ॥
इति चिंतानुरोधी यः कुर्वन्नपि करोति न ॥२५॥

25. He who knows that it is the body which is acting, not he the pure Self, such a one, even though acting, does not in reality act.

अतद्वादीव कुरुते न भवेदपि बालिशः ॥
जीवन्मुक्तः सुखी श्रीमान् संसरन्नपि शोभते ॥२६॥

26. Without saying that he is doing this, the man of released soul does his part in life and is yet not like a child. He moves in the world happy and looks attractive and blessed with good fortune.

नानाविचारसुश्रांतो धीरो विश्रांतिमागतः ॥
न कल्पते न जानाति न शृणोति न पश्यति ॥२७॥

27. Weared of diverse thoughts, the sage has found his peace. He does not desire, nor perceives, nor sees nor hears anything.

असमाधेरविक्षेपान्न मुमुक्षुर्न चेतरः ॥
निश्चित्य कलिपतं पश्यन्नहैवास्ते महाशयः ॥२८॥

28. The man of great soul is neither an aspirant of release for he does not long for Samádhi, nor is he bound by the world because for him there is no distraction ; knowing that all is illusion, he abides in his own Self like Brahman himself.

यस्यांतः स्यादहंकारो न करोति करोति सः ॥
निरहंकारधीरेण न किंचिदकृतं कृतम् ॥ २९ ॥

29. He who has the sense of the "I" in him, is acting even though he does not act. But for the sage who is free from all sense of the "I," there is no action, even in action.

नोद्विग्नं न च संतुष्टमकर्तुं स्पंदवर्जितम् ॥
निराशं गतसंदेहं चित्तं मुक्तस्य राजते ॥ ३० ॥

30. The mind of the emancipate is unruffled ; it is neither pleased nor does it act, free from desire and doubt, it shines.

निर्ध्यातुं चेष्टितुं वापि यज्ञितं न प्रवर्तते ॥
निर्निमित्तामिदं किंतु निर्ध्यायति विचेष्टते ॥ ३१ ॥

31. The mind which does not hanker either towards rest or motion, engages in action and works as if without a motive.

तत्त्वं यथार्थमाकर्ण्य मंदः प्राप्नोति मूढताम् ॥
अथवायाति संकोचममूढः कोऽपि मूढवत् ॥ ३२ ॥

32. One of weak intellect becomes puzzled on hearing truth expounded as it is, or takes to meditation in order to know the meaning of the Sastras. It is only some one, who though not a child, acts like one.<sup>1</sup>

एकाग्रता निरोधो वा सूदैरभ्यस्यते शृशम् ॥
धीराः कृत्यं न पश्यन्ति सुकृतवत्स्वपदे स्थिताः ॥३३॥

33. Concentration and subjugation of the mind are the constant refuge of the foolish. The wise do not see anything to be done, they rest in their own self like persons in sleep<sup>2</sup>.

अप्रयत्नात्प्रयत्नद्वा मूढो नामोति निर्वृतिम् ॥
तत्त्वानेश्चयमात्रेण प्राज्ञो भवति निर्वृतः ॥ ३४ ॥

34. The fool does not attain to peace either by action or inaction, the sage finds his rest by mere ascertainment of truth.

शुद्धं बुद्धं प्रियं पूर्णं निष्प्रपञ्चं निरामयम् ॥
आत्मानं तं न जानन्ति तत्राभ्यासपरा जनाः ॥ ३५ ॥

35. Those in whom the body consciousness is yet powerful on account of past karma, do not know the Atmá which is pure intelligence, the object of supreme love, the perfect, above the Sansara and unblemished, and engage in diverse practices towards its attainment.

(1) Brahman as described in the Vedanta does puzzle the ordinary mind, which cannot reconcile itself to statements like these.—“He is beyond the known as well as the unknown. He is beyond speech and thought. He is known to those who do not know him and unknown to those who know him. He guides the senses and is yet above them.” But the philosopher knows this to be the only way of describing that which is left after negation of the finite.

(2) On rising from Samadhi the world reasserts itself to one who practises it, not to the knower of the Self in the last stage who sees nothing but the Self everywhere.

नाप्रोति कर्मणा मोक्षं विमूढोऽभ्यासरूपिणा ॥
धन्यो विज्ञानमात्रेण मुक्तस्तिष्ठत्यविक्रियः ॥३६॥

36. The fool does not attain to emancipation even by constant practice. The blessed one attains to freedom from action by mere knowledge (realization).

मूढो नाप्रोति तद्ब्रह्म यतो भवितुमिच्छति ॥
अनिच्छन्नपि धीरो हि परब्रह्मस्वरूपभाक् ॥३७॥

37. The fool does not attain to Brahman because he wishes to become it. But the sage is the very Self of Brahman without wishing for it.

निराधारा ग्रहव्यया मूढाः संसारपोषकाः ॥
एतस्यानर्थमूलस्य मूलच्छेदः कृतो बुधैः ॥३८॥

38. Fools, since they have no firm foundation and are only anxious to attain Brahman or Mukti, only bind themselves faster to the world. The wise however cut off the root of this world, the source of all misery.

न शांतिं लभते मूढो यतः शामितुमिच्छति ॥
धीरस्तत्त्वं विनिश्चित्य सर्वदा शांतमानसः ॥३९॥

39. The fool does not attain to peace because he strives to attain it. But the Sage having ascertained truth, has his mind always at peace.

कात्मनो दर्शनं तस्य यद्वृष्टमवलंबते ॥
धीरारास्तं तं न पश्यन्ति पश्यन्त्यात्मानमव्ययम् ॥४०॥

40. How can vision of Self be for him who clings to the visible ? The wise see it not (the phenomenal) ; they see their own immortal Self.

क निरोधो विमूढस्य यो निर्बिधं करोति वै ॥
स्वारामस्यैव धीरस्य सर्वदाऽसावकृत्रिमः ॥४१॥

41. How can Samádhi be for the fool who strives after the breaking of bonds ? Of the sage who finds his happiness in his own Self, the mind is always suppressed without effort,

भावस्य भावकः कश्चिन्न र्किञ्चिद्भावकोऽपरः ॥
उभयाभावकः कश्चिदेवमेव निराकुलः ॥४२॥

42. One believes the visible to be in fact existing. Another says that it does not really exist. But it is only some one who knows neither existence nor non-existence and is thus free from distraction.

शुद्धमद्यमात्मानं भावयन्ति कुबुद्धयः ॥
न तु जानन्ति संमोहाद्यावज्जीवमनिर्वृताः ॥४३॥

43. Men of crooked understandings meditate upon the Atmá the ever pure and one without a second, but perceive it not through delusion, and therefore find no peace all their lives.

मुमुक्षोर्बुद्धिरालंबमंतरेण न विद्यते ॥
निरालंबैव निष्कामा बुद्धिर्मुक्तस्य सर्वदा ॥४४॥

44. The intellect of the aspirant for release cannot remain without a support. But the intellect of one who has been released, requires no support, and is ever free from desire.

विषयद्वीपिनो वीक्ष्य चकिताः शरणार्थिनः ॥
विशंति इटिति क्रोडं निरोधैकाग्रसिद्धये ॥ ४५ ॥

45. Fools on seeing those tigers known as objects of sense rushing towards them, get frightened and forthwith take refuge in the cave of suppression of the mind and go into meditation or concentration, not so the wise who heed them not.

निर्वासनं हरिं दृष्ट्वा तूष्णीं विषयदंतिनः ॥
पलायंते न शक्तास्ते सेवंते कृतचाटवः ॥ ४६ ॥

46. Elephants of sensual delights on seeing the tiger of renunciation either fly away or like parasites serving a rich person, serve him.

न मुक्तिकारिकां धत्ते निःशंको युक्तमानसः ॥
पद्यन्शृणवन् स्पृशन्जग्नशन्नास्ते यथामुखम् ॥४७॥

47. The man whose mind ever rests in the Atmá and whose doubts have been removed, does not strive for the means of obtaining release. Seeing, hearing, touching, smelling, eating, he is happy.

वस्तुश्रवणमात्रेण शुद्धबुद्धिर्निराकुलः ॥
नैवाचारमनाचारमौदास्यं वा प्रपश्यति ॥४८॥

48. One whose intellect has become pure and free from distraction by mere listening to (knowledge of) the thing in itself (Brahman), sees nought to be done or to be avoided, nor betakes himself to inaction.

यदा यत्कर्तुमायाति तदा तत्कुरुते शजुः ॥
शुभं वाप्यशुभं वापि तस्य चेष्टा हि बालवत् ४९

49. Whatever comes to him, whether pleasant or unpleasant, that he does straight. His actions are like those of a child (free from all thought of self).

स्वातंत्र्यात्सुखमाप्नोति स्वातंत्र्याल्लभते परम् ॥
स्वातंत्र्यान्निर्वृतिं गच्छेत्स्वातंत्र्यात्परमं पदम् ॥५०॥

50. Through freedom one attains to happiness, through freedom to the Supreme, through freedom to peace and through freedom to the highest abode.

अकर्तृत्वमभोक्तृत्वं स्वात्मनो मन्यते यदा ॥
तदा क्षीणा भवत्येव समस्ताश्चित्तवृत्तयः ॥ ५१ ॥

51. As soon as one knows that the Atmá is ever free from both action and enjoyment of the fruit thereof, all actions of the mind become attenuated.

उच्छ्रुत्खलाप्यकृतिका स्थितिर्धीरस्य राजते ॥
न तु सस्पृहचित्तस्य शांतिर्मूढस्य कृत्रिमा ॥५२॥

52. The condition of the wise shines even in its natural freedom, not so the artificial peace of mind of the fool with desire lurking in the heart.

विलसंति महाभौगैर्विशंति गिरिगव्हरान् ॥
निरस्तकल्पना धीरा अवद्धा मुक्तबुद्धयः ॥५३॥

53. The wise whose minds are ever free, sometimes enjoy objects of sense, at other times retire into caves of mountains. Ever firm, ever liberated, their intellects are not bound to anything.

श्रोत्रियं देवतां तीर्थमंगनां भूपतिं प्रियम् ॥
दृष्ट्वा संपूज्य धीरस्य न कापि हृदि वासना ॥५४॥

54. No desire of any description ever lurks in the heart of the Sage on seeing and honoring a man of learning, a god, a woman, a king or an object of affection.

भृत्यैः पुत्रैः कल्पैश्च दौहित्रैश्चापि गोत्रजैः ॥
बिहस्य धिक्कृतो योगी न याति विकृतिं मनाक् ॥५५

55. The Yogi never loses in the least his equanimity of temper, even when ridiculed by his own servants, sons, wives, daughter's sons or other relations.

संतुष्टोऽपि न संतुष्टः खिन्नोऽपि न च खिद्यते ॥
तस्याश्र्वर्यदशां तां तादश एव जानते ॥५६॥

56. Though pleased he is not pleased, though displeased, he is not displeased. His wonderful condition is known only to one like himself.

कर्तव्यैतैव संसारो न तां पश्येति सूर्यः ॥
शून्याकारा निराकारा निर्विकारा निरामयाः ॥५७॥

57. The world is merely an idea of things to be done. But the wise see it not. They are unattached to form, they are without form, ever free from disturbance and trouble<sup>1</sup>.

(1) The idea of duty is coexistent with the reality of the phenomenal world. When the nature of the phenomenal is known, there is no longer any idea of duty.

अकुर्वन्नपि संक्षोभादव्यथः सर्वत्र मूढधीः ॥
कुर्वन्नपि तु कृत्यानि कुशलो हि निराकुलः ॥५८॥

58. The fool even though not doing anything is ever distracted and uneasy. The sage, even though doing what is to be done, is ever at ease.

सुखमास्ते सुखं शेते सुखमायाति याति च ॥
सुखं वक्ति सुखं भुक्ते वयवहारेऽपि शांतधीः ॥५९॥

59. Complacently he sits, complacently he sleeps, happy he goes about and comes, happy he speaks, happy he eats, even in the world, ever the man of serene mind.

स्वभावद्यस्य नैवार्तिलोकवदव्यवहारिणः ॥
महाहृद इवाक्षोभ्यो गतक्षेशः सःशोभते ॥ ६० ॥

60. He who does not from his very nature feel troubled when acting like other men (on account of the strength of his knowledge of Self), who remains unagitated like a deep lake and has no sorrow, even he is happy.

निवृत्तिरपि मूढस्य प्रवृत्तिरूपजायते ॥
प्रवृत्तिरपि धीरस्य निवृत्तिफलभागिनी ॥ ६१ ॥

61. To the fool cessation from action becomes action, to the sage action yields the same fruit as cessation from action.

परिग्रहेषु वैराग्यं प्रायो मूढस्य हृशयते ॥
देहे विगलिताशस्य क्व रागः क्व विरागता ॥ ६२ ॥

62. It is the fool who only shows distaste for objects of the world, like house, wife, children, body &c., (without trying to learn the root of the disease) but for one who has lost all sense of I in the body, where is attachment or non-attachment ?

भावनाभावनासक्ता दृष्टिमूढस्य सर्वदा ॥
भाव्यभावनया सा तु स्वस्थस्यादृष्टिरूपिणी ॥६३॥

63. The mind of the fool is always directed to the entertainment of one thought or the suppression of another<sup>2</sup>. But the vision of the sage, though apparently directed towards the world, is not really so directed, he having destroyed all sense of egoism.

सर्वारंभेषु निष्कामो यश्चरेद्वालवन्मुनिः ॥
न लैपस्तस्य शुद्धस्य क्रियमाणेऽपि कर्मणि ॥६४॥

64. For that pure Muni who moves about like a child unattached to all conditions and who is free from desire, there is no defilement, even though he may be busy in the affairs of the world.

स एव धन्य आत्मज्ञः सर्वभावेषु यः समः ॥
पद्यनश्वृपवन्स्पृशन् जिग्नेश्वन्निस्तर्षमानसः ॥६५॥

65. He is verily the blessed knower of the self, who is the same in all conditions, whether seeing, hearing, touching, smelling, eating. His mind is ever free from desire.

क संसारः क चाभासः क साध्यं क च साधनम् ॥
आकाशस्येव धीरस्य निर्विकल्पस्य सर्वदा ॥६६॥

(2) i. e., existence or non-existence.

66. Where is the world, where delusion, where any object of attainment, where the means, of its attainment, for the sage who, like the limitless Akása, is free from all action of the mind ?

सजयत्यर्थसंन्यासी पूर्णस्वरसविघ्नः ॥
अकृत्रिमोऽनवच्छिन्ने समाधिर्थस्य वर्तते ॥ ६७ ॥

67. He who from his very nature is merged in that which is limitless, abides in his own true self in all its fullness, and conquers all objects of sense. Even he is victorious.

बहुनात्र किमुक्तेन ज्ञाततत्त्वो महाशयः ॥
भोगमोक्षानिराकांक्षी सदा सर्वत्र नीरसः ॥ ६८ ॥

68. What need is there of saying much, the man of great soul who has known the truth, is unattached to both release as well as enjoyment and is always disinclined to everything.

महदादि जगद्वैतं नाममात्रविजृभितम् ॥
विहाय शुद्धबोधस्य किं कृत्यमवशिष्यते ॥ ६९ ॥

69. This world of relativity consisting of Mahat (Intellect)<sup>1</sup> and the rest, is nothing but a modification of name. What is left for the sage who has relinquished it and whose knowledge is ever pure, to do ?

अत्रमभूतभिदं सर्वं किंचिन्नास्तीति निश्चयी ।
अलक्ष्यस्फुरणः शुद्धः स्वभावेनैव शाम्यति ॥७०॥

(1) This refers to the principles composing the universe. These are Prakriti (the unmanifested-condition of matter), the mahat (its first manifestation as universal intelligence), the Ahankara (Egoism), panchatanmatras, (five causal elements), the 11 organs of sensation and action, the mind and the five elements together with their combinations.

70. All this is a mere illusion, a mere nothing. One who knows this for certain, whose light is that which is beyond all ken, which is ever pure, finds peace as if it were natural to him.

शुद्धस्फुरणरूपस्य दृश्यभावमपश्यतः ॥
क विधिः क च वैराग्यं क्षत्यागः क शमोऽपि वा ॥७१॥

71. For one who is of the nature of pure consciousness, and is not conscious of the visible, where is obligation to perform action, where its abandonment, where non-attachment, where even serenity itself ?

स्फुरतोऽनंतरूपेण प्रकृतिं च न पश्यतः ॥
क बंधः क च वा मोक्षः क हर्षः क विषादिता ॥७२॥

72. For one who sees himself as the Infinite and does not see the Prakriti (nature) where is bondage, where release, where pleasure, where pain ?

बुद्धिपर्यंतसंसारे मायामात्रं विवर्तते ॥
निर्ममो निरहंकारो निष्कामः शोभते बुधः ॥७३॥

73. In the world which is coexistent with the intellect and is superimposed upon the Atmá by the action of the Mâyá, the sage who is free from all sense of I or mine, and who is above desire, alone shines.

अक्षयं गतसंतापमात्मानं पश्यतो मुनेः ॥
क विद्या क च वा विश्वं क देहोऽहंममेति वा ॥७४॥

74. For the Muni who sees his Atmá to be free from destruction and pain, where is knowledge, where the world, where this body and where I or mine ?

निरोधादीनि कर्माणि जहाति जडधीर्यदि ।
मनोरथान्प्रलापांश्च कर्तुमाप्नोत्यतत्क्षणात् ७५

75. The moment the man of weak intellect gives up his practice of concentration of the mind &c., he begins to have diverse thoughts and desires in it.

मंदः श्रुत्वापि तद्वस्तु न जहाति विमूढताम् ॥
निर्विकल्पो वहिर्यत्नादंतर्विषयलालसः ॥ ७६ ॥

76. The fool does not give up his folly even after hearing that which is truth itself. Though suppressing mental action by force, he is internally attached to objects of sense.

ज्ञानाद्विलितरुर्मा यो लोकदृष्टव्यापि कर्मकृत् ॥
नाप्नोत्यवसरं कर्तुं वकुमेव न किंचन ॥ ७७ ॥

77. He whose Karma has been destroyed by knowledge, even though he may be acting in the sight of men, does not get time to do or speak of anything whatever<sup>1</sup>.

क तमः क प्रकाशो वा हानं क च न किंचन ॥
निर्विकारस्य धीरस्य निरातंकस्य सर्वदा ॥ ७८ ॥

78. For the man of wisdom who is free from fault, who is ever fearless, where is darkness, where light, what to renounce, what to gain ?

क धैर्यं क विवेकित्वं क निरातंकतापिवा ॥
अनिर्वाच्यस्वभावस्य निःस्वभावस्य योगिनः ७९

(1) So absorbed is he in his own Self.

79. Where is fortitude, where wisdom, where even fearlessness itself, for the Yogi of indescribable nature who transcends nature itself.

न स्वर्गो न नरको जीवन्मुक्तिर्न चैवहि ॥
वहुनात्र किमुक्तेन योगदृष्ट्या न किंचन ॥ ८० ॥

80. There is no heaven, no hell, not even release in life (Jiwan mukti). What need is there to say much, in the view of the Yogi there is here nothing whatever ?

नैव प्रार्थयते लाभं नालाभेनानुशोचति ॥
धीरस्य शीतलं चित्तममृतेनैव पूरितम् ॥ ८१ ॥

81. The sage does not hanker after gain, nor grieves at the non-attainment of what was wished for; his mind is calm and ever full of the water of life .

न शांतं स्तौति निष्कामो न दुष्टमपि निंदति ॥
समदुःखमुखस्तृप्तः किंचित्कृत्यं न पश्यति ॥ ८२ ॥

82. The man who is free from desire, does not praise one who is serene, nor blames him who is addicted to evil ways ; the same in pleasure and pain, always satisfied, he does not see anything for himself to do.

धीरो न द्वेष्टि संसारमात्मानं न दिव्यक्षति ॥
हर्षामर्हविनिर्मुक्तो न मृतो न च जीवति ॥ ८३ ॥

83. The sage feels no aversion for the world nor is anxious to see his own self ; free from joy and sorrow, he is neither alive nor dead.<sup>1</sup>

(1) His condition is indescribable. Though dead in the sight of the world, he lives in his own self.

निःस्नेहः पुत्रदारादौ निष्कामो विषयेषु च ॥

निश्चितः स्वशरीरेऽपि निराशः शोभते बुधः ॥८४॥

84. Free from attachment to sons and spouses, above all desire for objects of the world, as well as all care for his own body, the sage shines.

तुष्टिः सर्वत्र धीरस्य यथापतितवर्तिनः ॥

स्वच्छुदं चरतो देशान्यत्रस्तमितशायिनः ॥ ८५ ॥

85. For the sage who takes what comes to him, who moves about free in the world, sleeping where the sun sets upon his head, there is always happiness.

पततूदेतु वा देहो नास्य चिंता महात्मनः ॥

स्वभावभूमिविश्रांतिविस्मृताशेषसंसृतेः ॥ ८६ ॥

86. Let the body come or go, the sage grieves for it not. He has forgotten everything of the world, having found his rest in his own self.

अकिञ्चनःकामचारो निर्द्वदिछन्नसंशयः ॥

असक्तः सर्वभावेषु केवलो रमते बुधः ॥ ८७ ॥

87. The sage who has nothing to look forward, whose movements are free, who is above all pairs of opposites, whose doubts have all been removed, and who is unattached to any condition whatever, alone moves about happy.

निर्ममः शोभते धीरः समलोष्टादमकांचनः ॥

सुभिन्नहृदयग्राथिर्विनिर्धूतरजस्तमः ॥ ८८ ॥

88. The sage whose sense of "mine" has gone, who is unmoved at the sight of a piece of clay, or stone or gold, the fetters of whose heart have been rent asunder, whose rajas and tamas (passion and delusion) have been washed off, shines.

सर्वत्रानवधानस्य न किंचिद्वासनाहृदि ॥

मुक्तात्मनो वितृप्तस्य तुलना केनजायते ॥८९॥

89. What is there to compare with one who has no attachment to anything, who has no thought in the heart, and whose mind is quite free and is completely peaceful ?

जानन्नपि न जानाति पश्यन्नपि न पश्यति ॥

ब्रुवन्नपि न च ब्रूते कोऽन्यो निर्वासनाहृते ॥९०॥

90. Knowing he does not know, seeing he does not see, speaking he does not speak, who can be such a one except one who is free from all desires ?

भिक्षुर्वा भूपातिर्वापि यो निष्कामः स शोभते ॥

भावेषु गलिता यस्य शोभनाशोभना मतिः ॥९१॥

91. Be he a king or a beggar, he who is free from desire alone reigns supreme, even he whose inclination towards the good and the bad has been completely subjugated. (¹)

(¹) " Such amongst kings were Janaka of Mithila, Dilipa the ancestor of Itaina, and Mandhata ; amongst Asuras Bali and Prahlada; amongst the gods Agni, Soma, Vayu, Brahma, Vishnu and Mahesha; and amongst rishis Narada and Vishwamitra. Having attained supreme knowledge some like Bhrigu, Bharadvaja, Vishwamitra and Suka betook themselves to the forest; some continued ruling kingdoms like Janaka, Saryati, Mandhata and Sagar ; some like Brihaspati, Chandra and Surya live in the stellar regions ; some like Agni, Vayu, Yama, Tumbura and Narada, live in the mansions of the gods and some like Bali, Sahotra and Prahlada, in the lower regions. Some live in higher and some in lower orders of creation. All things are everywhere in every condition possible in the Atmā, the Self of all. Release is two kinds, embodied and disembodied. Unattachment to objects of affection is mukti. The state of oneness (kaivalya) is common to both. The embodied is in life, the disembodied after death. To the man of wisdom who always reflects upon the nature of things, this world becomes easy to move in like passing over the foot print of a cow, for one who does not so reflect, it is difficult to cross like a great ocean". (Yoga Vashista Upasamsa Prakarana Chap. 75).

क स्वाच्छंद्यं क संकोचः क वा तत्त्वविनिश्चयः ॥
निर्दर्शार्जवभूतस्य चारितार्थस्य योगिनः ॥९२॥

92. Where is freedom, where confinement, where the ascertainment of truth, for the Yogi who has become the embodiment of unimpeachable sincerity and who has achieved his object ?

आत्मविश्रांतितृसेन निराशेन गतार्तिना ॥
अंतर्यदनुभूयेत तत्कथं कस्य कथ्यते ॥९३॥

93. What language can describe and to whom, can it describe that which he who has found his satisfaction in his own self, who is free from all desire, whose trouble has disappeared, feels inside himself ?

मुसोऽपि न मुषुप्तौ च स्वप्नेऽपि शायितो न च ॥
जागरेऽपि न जागर्ति धीरस्तुपः पदेपदे ॥९४॥

94. The sage though in sound slumber does not sleep, though dreaming he does not dream, though awake he is really not awake. He is happy in every condition.

ज्ञः सञ्चितोऽपि निश्चितः सेंद्रियोऽपि निरिंद्रियः ॥
मुनुद्धिरापि निर्बुद्धिः साहंकारोऽनहंकृतिः ॥९५॥

95. The man of knowledge though thinking, is in truth not thinking, though cognizing through his organs of sense he is without organs of sense, though having an intellect he is not having it, and though possessed of egoism, he is not in reality so possessed.

न सुखी न च वा दुःखी न विरक्तो न संगवान् ॥
न सुमुक्षुर्न वा सुक्तो न किंचिन्न च किंचन ॥९६॥

96. He is neither happy, nor miserable, neither attached, nor free from attachment, neither an aspirant after release, nor in fact released, neither this thing nor that thing.

विक्षेपेऽपि न विक्षिप्तः समाधौ न समाधिमान् ॥
जाङ्गेऽपि न जडोधन्यः पांडित्येऽपि न पंडितः ९७

97. He is undistracted in distractions, unmeditating even when meditating, never dull even though appearing to be dull, not learned even though appearing to be learned.

मुक्तो ग्रथास्थितिस्वस्थः कृतकर्तव्यनिर्वृतः ॥
समः सर्वत्र वैतृष्ण्यान्न स्मरत्यकृतं कृतम् ॥९८॥

98. One who is released abides in his own nature and takes what comes to him ; he is free from what has to be done or has been done ; he is unagitated under every condition, and being free from desire, does not remember what he has or has not done.

न प्रीयते वन्यमानो निन्यमानो न कुप्यति ॥
नैवोद्विजति मरणे जीवने नाभिनंदति ॥ ९९ ॥

99. Worshipped he does not feel delighted, spurned at he does not feel angry, he is not agitated at the thought of death, nor welcomes the prospect of a long life.

न धावति जनाकीर्णं नारण्यमुपशांतधीः ॥
यथातथा यत्रतत्र सम एवावतिष्ठते ॥ १०० ॥

100. The man whose mind has found peace, does not run towards society nor towards the forest. He lives happy everywhere and under every condition<sup>1</sup>.

CHAPTER 19.

Eight verses on the disciple's rest in his Atma.

तत्त्वविज्ञानसंदंशमादाय हृदयोदरात् ॥
नानाविधपरामर्शशल्योद्धारः कृतो मया ॥१॥

1. Says the disciple :—I have now extracted from the innermost recess of my heart the thorn of conflicting thoughts with the tongs of the knowledge of Truth.

क धर्मः क च वा कामः क चार्थः क विवेकिता ॥
क द्वैतं क च वाऽद्वैतं स्वमहिम्नि स्थितस्य मे ॥२॥

2. For me who abide in my own glory, where is virtue, where pleasure, where greatness, where discernment, where unity or diversity ?

क भूतं क भाविष्यद्वा वर्तमानमपि क वा ॥
क देशः क च वा नित्यं स्वमहिम्नि स्थितस्य मे ॥३॥

(1) All these contradictory attributes are mentioned here to indicate the indescribable condition of the sage. Having relinquished all thought of objects of sense, free from all action at the mind, he lives, moves about and sleeps happy. For him who has found rest in his own self (Atma), either the world is not, Brahman alone is, or the world is nothing but Brahman. The two do not appear separate but one. Though appearing to act in the sight of men, he does not in reality act, because he has lost all sense of "I" or "mine."

3. Where is the past, where future, where present, where space, where anything else, for me who eternally abide in my own glory ?

क चात्मा क च वानात्मा क शुभं काशुभं तथा ॥
क चिंता क च वाचिंता स्वमहिम्नि स्थितस्य मे ४

4. Where is self or not self, where good or evil, where care or the absence thereof, for me who abide in my own glory ?

क स्वभः क सुषुप्तिवा क च जागरणं तथा ॥
क तुरीयं भयं वापि स्वमहिम्नि स्थितस्य मे ॥५॥

5. Where is dream, where sound slumber, where the waking condition, where the fourth state which is beyond these, where fear, for me who abide in my own glory ?

क दूरं क समीपं वा बाह्यं काभ्यन्तरं क वा ॥
क स्थूलं क च वा सूक्ष्मं स्वमहिम्नि स्थितस्य मे ॥६॥

6. Where is far or near, inside or outside, gross or subtle, for me who abide in my own glory ?

क मृत्युर्जीवितं वा क लोकाः कास्य क लौकिकम् ॥
क लयः क समाधिर्वा स्वमहिम्नि स्थितस्य मे ७

7. Where is death or life, the world or its worldliness, where merging of the visible or the concentration of thought, for me who abide in my own glory ?

अलं त्रिवर्गकथया योगस्य कथयाप्यलम् ॥
अलं विज्ञानकथया विश्रांतस्य ममात्मनि ॥८॥

8.. Enough therefore of all stories about the three objects of life, (virtue, pleasure and profit), enough of all stories of Yoga or wisdom, for me who have found rest in my own self.

CHAPTER 20.

Fourteen verses on the condition of one who is emancipated in life.

क भूतानि क देहो वा कोद्रियाणि क वा मनः ॥
क शून्यं क च नैराश्यं मत्स्वरूपं निरंजने ॥१॥

1. Says the disciple :—Where are the elements or the body, where the organs of sense or the mind, where void or fulness, or absence of desire in me who am free from blemish ?

क शास्त्रे कात्मविज्ञानं क वा निर्विषयं मनः ॥
क तृप्तिः क वित्तुष्णात्वं गतद्वंद्वस्य मे सदा ॥२॥

2. Where is the Sastra or knowledge of self, or even the mind free from thought of objects, or contentment or absence of desire, for me who have lost all sense of duality ?

क विद्या क च वाविद्या काहं केदं मम क वा ॥
क बंधः क च वा मोक्षः स्वरूपस्य क रूपिता ॥३॥

3. Where is knowledge or ignorance, where I or mine, where this or that, where release or bondage or form, for me the Supreme Intelligence ?

क प्रारब्धानि कर्माणि जीवनमुक्तिरपि क वा ।
क तद्विदेह कैवल्यं निर्वेशेषस्य सर्वदा ॥ ४ ॥

4. Where are karmas which gave the present incarnation and are now bearing fruit, where release in life, where unembodied release, for me who have no attributes?

क कर्ता क च वा भोक्ता निष्क्रियं स्फुरणं क वा ॥
कापरोक्षं फलं वा क निःस्वभावस्य मे सदा ॥५॥

5. Where is the actor, where the enjoyer of fruit of action or the rising of thought of action, where the visible result of knowledge, in me who am free from all conditions what ever?

क लोकः क मुमुक्षुर्वा क योगी ज्ञानवान् क वा ॥
क बद्धः क च वा मुक्तः स्वस्वरूपेऽहमद्वये ॥ ६ ॥

6. Where is the world or one who is desirous of release, where is the Yogi or the man of wisdom or one bound or released, for me who abide in my own nature and am without a second?

क सृष्टिः क च संहारः क साध्ये क च साधनम् ॥
क साधकः क सिद्धिर्वा स्वस्वरूपेऽहमद्वये ॥ ७ ॥

7. Where is creation or dissolution, where is the object to be attained or the means of its attainment, where one who strives for it or attainment of success, for me who abide in my own nature free from all duality?

क प्रमाता प्रमाणं वा क प्रमेयं क च प्रमा ॥
क किंचित्कन किंचिद्वा सर्वदा विमलस्य से ॥८॥

8. Where is the cognizer, the instrument of cognition, the object of cognition or the conception of such object, where is something or want of something, in me who am ever pure ?

कं विक्षेपः कं चैकाइयं कं निर्बोधः कं मूढता ॥

कं हर्षः कं विषादो वा सर्वदा निष्क्रियस्य मे ॥९॥

9. Where is distraction or concentration, knowledge or dullness, pleasure or pain, in me who am ever without action ?

कं चैष व्यवहारो वा कं च सा परमार्थता ॥

कं सुखं कं च वा दुःखं निर्विमर्शस्य मे सदा ॥१०॥

10. Where is this business of the world, where that condition of spiritual knowledge, where happiness or misery, in me who am always above thought ?

कं माया कं च संसारः कं प्रीतिर्विरातिः कं वा ॥

कं जीवः कं च तद्ब्रह्म सर्वदा विमलस्य मे ॥११॥

11. Where is illusion, where the world, where affection or the absence thereof, where the embodied self or that which is known as Brahman, in me the ever pure ?

कं प्रवृत्तिर्विवृत्तिर्वा कं मुक्तिः कं च बन्धनम् ॥

कूटस्थनिर्विभागस्य स्वस्थस्य मम सर्वदा ॥ १२ ॥

12. Where is activity or inaction, release or bondage for me who am always unchangeable, ever undivided, ever abiding in my own self ?

कोपदेशः क वा शास्त्रं कश्चिष्यः क च वा गुरुः ॥
क चास्ति पुरुषार्थो वा निरपाधेः शिवस्य मे ॥१३॥

13. Where is instruction, or the Sastra, disciple or teacher or any object of search for me, the ever blissful, ever free from all limitation.

क चास्ति क च वा नास्ति कास्ति चैकं क च द्रयम् ॥
बहुनाम्र किमुक्तेन किंचिन्नोत्तिष्ठते मम ॥ १४ ॥

14. Where is that which is or which is not, where is one or two. What need is there of saying much, there is nothing which takes its rise in me?

दश षट् चोपदेशो स्युः इलोकाश्च पञ्चविशतिः ॥
सत्यात्मानुभवोल्लासे उपदेशो चतुर्दश ॥१॥

(1) This is the final stage of Gyāna or self-realization, where the knower of Brahman has become Brahman itself, above thought and free from specific cognition. To him all is Chidākāśa (intelligence unbounded). He is the very Self of knowledge. For him there is no other to see, no other to cognize. It is all one. This was illustrated by Rishi Vashishtha who while exhorting Rama to abide in his own self while discharging his duties in life, to make his waking condition one of dreamless slumber and the condition of dreamless slumber his waking condition, to find his rest in that which remained after the union of the two; i. e., in Brahman, to abide in that which subsisted after the negation of all conditions of both unity and diversity, where the I and the world, both ceased to exist, was asked by Rama as to who that Vashishtha was who was speaking. He replied it by silence and when asked for the reason of the silence, replied, that that was the only answer to Rama's question. "All instruction," said he, "Whether in-duality or non-duality is through speech and thought, both of which from their very nature are conditioned, and when the disciple has reached the stage where true knowledge should be imparted to him, then silence is the only means of imparting it. All that is within the range of thought is not out of the sphere of nescience (Avidya). In the last resort silence is the only way of indicating the supreme self. No preceptor can impart to the disciple more than what he himself is and when Brahman in which he abides, is in fact silence, he can only teach his disciple by silence." This is the negation of all that is time, space and causality, the stage of Nirvikalpa, of Yoga.

1. There are 16 Slokas of instruction, 25 showing the realization by the disciple of his own Atma and fourteen the manner in which the Guru questions his pupil's realization of self.

षटुल्लासे लये चैवोपदेशे च चतुश्चतुः ॥
पञ्चकं स्यादनुभवे बन्धमोक्षे चतुष्ककम् ॥ २ ॥

2. There are six Slokas showing the bliss of realization, four conveying the method of self-absorption, four showing the manner in which the Atma is known by the wise, and five wherein the disciple re-echoes his knowledge thereof.

निर्वेदोपशमे ज्ञाने एवमेवाष्टकं भवेत् ॥
यथागुखे सप्तकं च शांतौ स्याद्वेदसंभितम् ॥ ३ ॥

3. Four treat of release and bondage, eight deal with non attachment and eight treat of the subject of peace, eight with that of knowledge, eight with the true condition of the knower ; seven deal with Yathā Sukha (happiness), and four with bliss.

तत्त्वोपदेशे विंशत्त्व दश ज्ञानोपदेशके ॥
तत्त्वस्वरूपे विंशत्त्व शमे च शतकं भवेत् ॥ ४ ॥

4. There are 20 Slokas in the instruction about truth, ten in that of knowledge, 20 relate to the nature of truth and 100 to contentment or quietude.

अष्टकं चात्मविश्रांतौ जीवन्मुक्तौ चतुर्दश ।
षट् संख्याक्रमविज्ञाने अथकात्म्य ततः परम् ॥५॥

5. There are 8 slokas about rest in the Atmá, 14 about Jiwau mukti and six show the number of verses in the book, after which is a summary of the chapters of the work and of the whole.

विश्वत्येकमितैः खंडैः इलोकैरात्माग्निमध्यखैः ॥
अवधूतानुभूतेश्च इलोकाः संख्याक्रमा अमी ॥५॥

6. There are 21 sections and 302 verses in the book. The last 303 does not count. The three are the five, (elements), the two are the embodied and supreme Self, and the zero is the Akasa or ether.
